Plan for Care Of Own Needy Is Announced By Mormons

88,000 Indigent to Be Taken Off U. S. Rolls and Given Aid.

Oct. 1 Set as Date For New Program

Leader Says Handling of Public Relief Is Too Indirect.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 24.—The Mormon Church will remove its 88,000 needy members from public relief rolls and support them itself, J. Reuben Clark, first counselor in the first presidency of the Latter Day Saints Church and former Ambassador to Mexico, announced tonight.

"Our aim is by October 1 to accumulate enough food, shelter and clothing to care for those who cannot care for themselves," Clark stated at a Mormon Church service here.

"The plan includes provision for those who have nothing to do something useful in return for that which they get," he said. "The president of the church feels it is time we got back to first principles and cared for our own."

Clark said he expected no difficulty in carrying out the work if the 750,000 Mormons in the United States "abide by the church teachings." He predicted it would be of spiritual benefit to all members.

Clark said he was not "critical" of Government relief, but said any mistakes in public relief administration were due to "faraway management."

"Man may have no compunction in taking aid from the Government," he said, "but if he has to take it from his brother or neighbor it probably will be a very different picture."

All to Contribute.

Clark said each Mormon will be expected to contribute the cost of two meals on the monthly fast day and the tithes rule, contribution of one-tenth of a member's income, will be enforced.

The procedure during the summer, Clark added, would be to take Mormons off home relief first and later to take the others off work relief.

"I believe $1,000,000 a year will take care of the task," he said, "and as for the cost, it will cost us only 45 per cent of what it costs the Government to care for these needy, because ours will be a service of love and none of these persons doing the work will be paid."

Agencies for carrying on the work already are functioning in the ward will be the bishop and his two church, he explained. Chiefs in each councilors. The districts, subdivisions of wards, will be "scoured by teachers" to determine the needy.

The women's relief society will continue its work both in aiding the needy and soliciting aid.

"The male population of the church, including the elders and priests, will have as their duty the obligation to see that no one suffers," Clark said.

Orders Given Out.

It was learned from local members of the Mormon Church that instructions have been issued to all units of the church as to how to provide funds and other means of bearing the relief burden.

These instructions came from the first presidency, governing body of the church of which Clark is first counselor, and went to all stakes and wards (comparable to diocese and congregation in other churches).

It was pointed out that the Mormon Church is a closely knit organization and that until the last depression had always provided for its needy members.

This step is to get back on the former basis of the church, providing for those of its members who are in need.

The theory of the church, it was said, is that every individual member should be self-supporting. This belief is to be fostered through self-help and barter plans.

King Lauds Plan.

Senator William H. King, of Utah, a member of the church, when reached for comment last night, praised the plan as "a chance for the people to show the dynamic moral force of Christianity."

"It is the people who ultimately have to pay the cost of relief," he said. "Then why, instead of supporting a lot of social workers on Government pay rolls to feed the needy, don't the local churches get together and care for them themselves?

"After all, they are better able to know those whose need is greatest."

He extolled his church for taking the initiative in the movement to help their own members and said he believed it should spread to other churches and social organizations.

"I do believe," he said, "if all local churches and social organizations took over responsibility for their needy, you would see a remarkable development in the morals of the people and a marked decrease in relief rolls.

"This is the time for the exemplification of the principles of Christianity. The citizens should go out and do social work instead of being satisfied with a mere sermon on Sunday."

Before the advent of the FERA, an estimated 30,000 people in Utah were active in the self-help and barter movement there.

The organization, called the Natural Development Association, owned a tannery, two coal mines, an oil refinery, a saw mill, soap factory, two canneries and a beauty and barber shop.

Wife of Leonard, Poet, Sues; Ended His Fear of Distances

Wisconsin Writer, Professor Distrusts Her, Says Matron as Youth-Age Idyll of Campus Ends in Divorce Court at Madison.

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., May 24.—The college girl who helped Prof. William Ellery Leonard, 60, to cope with his "distance phobia" has started suit for divorce because she said he mistrusted her.

The 28-year-old bride, the former Grace Golden, initiated the action after nearly a year of marriage in which she took her poet husband more than a few blocks from home for the first time in two decades.

The University of Wisconsin English professor had feared to walk more than a few blocks from his home on the campus because a railroad locomotive frightened him in his youth and made him mistrustful of distance.

Miss Golden was a student in one of his classes, and a common interest in poetry led to their marriage on June 29, 1935.

Still in the grip of his phobia, Prof. Leonard stayed at home for the wedding. The ceremony was secret, except to a half dozen close friends.

Soon the bride was luring her husband downtown on shopping trips. He traveled streets he never dared walk before. After the marriage he called it "the ideal thing. If this had happened 20 years ago, I wouldn't be afraid of distance now."

Last night, at the request of the wife's attorney, San W. Orr, Sheriff Lawrence Larson disclosed he had served preliminary divorce papers on Prof. Leonard. Other papers, returnable Tuesday, called on the white-haired poet to show cause why he should not pay his wife separate maintenance.

The sheriff said the papers charged the professor with telling the bride and her friends "she was insane," with "using improper language," and with "making accusations" of infidelity.

Prof. Leonard refused to discuss the case, except to say his wife "isn't here."

Relief 'Duress' Is Laid to WPA By Missourian

Citizens Are Denied Funds Unless They Favor Democrats, Is Charge.

Affidavits charging that Missouri citizens are denied relief unless they permit their ballots to be marked by Democratic politicians and contribute to Democratic campaign funds were presented yesterday to Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, by Arthur M. Curtis, Republican National committeeman from that State.

The charges were made in response to an invitation by Hopkins that "specific information" concerning relief conditions in Missouri be submitted.

Curtis also charged that women workers in a sewing room at Sedalia were required to go to a saloon and "sign up" as members of a Democratic club on penalty of losing their jobs, and those refusing to do so were discharged. He charged that male workers are required to subscribe to a Democratic newspaper, on penalty of having their names stricken from relief rolls.

Asks Hopkins for Data.

After submitting his evidence to Hopkins, Curtis asked in a letter:

"1. Do you approve of this type of relief administration?

"2. Are these local politicians, who seem to be in charge both of relief and the Democratic campaign, functioning without your knowledge?

"3. What steps have been taken, if any, to correct this condition in Missouri, and other States as well?

"4. Do you intend to take any steps to end this disgraceful perversion of Federal authority to political purposes?

"5. What reasonable excuse can you give to the country for not having corrected this condition before?

"6. Is it part of your fixed policy, as Works Progress administrator, to permit the field organization of the WPA to participate actively in local politics while continuing to administer the public funds entrusted to you?

"7. Do you approve of the alliance between the WPA in Missouri and the notoriously corrupt Pendergast machine?

"8. Have you, in any single instance, shown your good faith by completely divorcing the adminis-

Bride, 27, Kills Self After Husband's Dare

Chicago, May 24 (AP).—Mrs. Wilma Libby Armbruster, 27, a bride of two months, shot and killed herself today, her husband, Oliver, 42, told police, after he had "dared" her to commit suicide.

Police Capt. Martin McCormick quoted Armbruster, a salesman, as saying he believed his wife was "bluffing" when she threatened to end her life following an all-night quarrel. The husband said Mrs. Armbruster fired a shot into her right temple after he had provided a demonstration on how to use the weapon.

Socialist Bloc, Ousted, Plans To Form Party

Thomas' Forces Seated and New York 'Old Guard' Is Voted Down.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 24.—Within an hour after the national convention of the Socialist Party voted down the right-wing "old guard" forces from New York and seated the leftist delegation led by Norman Thomas, the leader of the "old guard" announced today it would organize a new party.

The convention, dominated by a coalition of leftists and the Wisconsin centrists forces, upheld the action of the national executive committee in suspending the charters of the "old guard" organizations before the New York primary, in which the leftists gained control.

The "old guard" delegation left the convention for a conference at its headquarters and, after a short discussion with rightist leaders from other States participating in the interstate caucas, the delegation leader, Louis Waldman, announced:

"As far as New York is concerned, there can be no doubt we will form a new party.

No Effort to Oust Them.

"The organizations in the interstate conference will continue to co-operate with us. There has been no effort to urge them to leave the convention. They must report back to the members they represent."

These delegations, Waldman said, are from Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Maryland and Washington.

The New York "old guard" members expect support among the Socialist Party membership in these States, he said.

However, rightist leaders from these States would make no predictions. Mayor Jasper McLevy, of Bridgeport—one of the leaders in the fight to seat the "old guard" from New York—said Connecticut could take no action on anything of this nature until the delegation has reported back to its State membership. Similar statements were made by delegates from Pennsylvania, Maryland and Massachusetts, who participated in the controversy over the New York dispute in behalf of the "old guard."

Waldman said he would make a further announcement as to the plans for the organization of the new party. Some members of the New York "old guard" said it might be called "the Social-Democratic Party."

Strength Undetermined.

In view of the necessity of rightist delegations reporting back to their State conventions or memberships, delegates of all factions were of the opinion it would be some weeks before there could be any estimation of what strength the "old guard" could muster among membership in States other than New York.

The immediate factor of today's schism was the action of the national executive committee in recognizing the leftist-controlled committees of New York City and State after the leftists were victorious in the April primary over the "old guard," which had controlled the State and city for years.

'Orange Tree' Bears Fruit Here, With Mechanical Dog on Guard

Allynn D. Hayworth, incurable nature faker, of 4312 Fourteenth street northwest, is at it again.

Hayworth, who more than a month ago astounded his neighbors by producing synthetically the first rose of the season, has gone his first prank one better.

This time he has an orange tree in full fruit.

Joseph Mulroe, Hayworth's neighboring garden and horseshoe rival, saw the tree the other day, and soon after it "bore."

"Well, I'll be damned," he said. "Things are happening so fast I can't keep up with them."

Mulroe was not fooled. Not for a minute. Neither were the other residents in the vicinity who are aware of Hayworth's reputation for beating nature to the draw.

But two men, driving a city refuse wagon, were taken aback by the sight.

"Looky there," said one. "An orange tree!"

"Lawdy!" replied the other. "Ah didn't know they grew in Washington;"

Guarding the tree and its ripe, luscious fruit is a life-size mechanical Scottie that barks and wags its tail and looks pretty real.

The Scottie looks so real, in fact, that Hayworth has put a sign that reads:

"Beware of Bad Dog."

He figures that the dog, the sign and a well-padlocked garden gate will keep hungry citizens from making a meal on his oranges.

There are about three dozen large navel oragines tied to the tree. To add a touch of verisimilitude some of them are scattered on the ground beneath, as if they had fallen of their own ripened weight.

The tree itself, an althea, looks quite a lot like an orange tree, Hayworth thinks. He considers that his latest feat will show his Florida and California friends that Washington has just as good a climate as they have.

Silver Buying Held 'Waste;' Repeal Asked

Economists Urge Congress to Halt Purchases Immediately.

Program Has Damaged World Trade, Finance Experts Claim.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 24.—Branding the United States silver purchase program "both wasteful and harmful," 82 members of the economists national committee on monetary policy today recommended to Congress that all silver buying "be stopped immediately and that the act be repealed."

Members of the committee, which in April, 1934, attacked the silver-purchase program on the ground it would "reduce confidence in the Nation's currency," charged it "has been damaging to international trade and finance."

Benefits Are Denied.

Declaring that the consequences of the Administration's silver program "fulfill the predictions made by this committee two years ago," the group declared:

"Neither the economic nor the monetary situation in the United States has been benefitted by this silver-purchase policy."

The policy was based on the act of 1934, designed to expand the Treasury's silver metal money base until there should be $1 of silver for every $3 of gold.

The recommendation, sponsored by economists and financial experts throughout the country, included among its signers:

Leonard P. Ayres, Cleveland Trust Co.; Edwin W. Kemmerer, Princeton University; Neil Carothers, Lehigh University; Frank W. Taussig, Harvard University; H. Parker Willis, Columbia University; Ralph A. Young, University of Pennsylvania; James W. Angell, Columbia University; Alzada Comstock, Mount Holyoke College, and Eleanor Lansing Dulles, University of Pennsylvania.

Program Called Wasteful.

The petition said:

"After acquiring approximately $35,000,000 ounces of silver (as of January 16, 1936), at artificially high prices, thus diluting our currency base with a cheap metal, our Government is hardly any nearer than before to its goal of a 1-to-3 ratio between the monetary silver and gold.

"It should be amply clear by this time that the program not only serves no useful purpose, but, on the contrary, is both wasteful and harmful.

"We therefore earnestly recommend to Congress:

"1. That all silver purchases under the silver-purchase act of June 19, 1934, be stopped immediately and that the act be repealed.

Would Halt Purchases.

"2. That all silver purchases under the President's proclamation of December 21, 1933, be discontinued and that notice of the abandonment of such silver purchases be sent to the signers of the international silver agreement of 1933, which has already, in certain respects, been violated by various parties to the agreement.

"Since one of the announced purposes of the agreement was to stabilize the price of silver, the United States itself can hardly be said to have lived up to this phase of the agreement.

"3. That all authority given the President to re-establish bimetallism or otherwise to subsidize the silver industry be promptly repealed.

"4. That over a period of eight years the silver now held by the Treasury be disposed of as advantageously as possible."

Youth Lives to Tell Of 153-Foot Dive

New Orleans, May 24 (U.P.).—Just to prove to two companions that it could be done, Louis J. Klein, 19, today dived from the Huey P. Long Bridge into the middle of the Mississippi River, 153 feet below, and lived to tell the story.

The story, told at the hospital, was: "I suppose everybody will think I'm a nut."

Two youthful companions, who had argued with him for weeks that he couldn't survive the dive, accompanied him to the bridge. They watched him jump, failed to see him reappear on the surface, and went to tell his mother he had been drowned.

An hour later, three woodchoppers working near the levee a mile downstream, heard faint cries for help. They saw Klein bogged in a mud bar 20 feet from the bank, unable to rise. They waded out and rescued him. He was suffering from slight shock and bruises.

New York, May 24 (U.P.).—The leap of Louis Klein from the Huey P. Long Bridge in New Orleans today surpassed by 20 feet the legendary dive of Steve Brodie, one of the "Bowery boys," from New York's Brooklyn Bridge on July 23, 1886.

Two Virginia Cities Add Sunday Movies

Richmond, May 24 (AP).—Theaters in Richmond and Charlottesville today joined those of other Virginia cities which operate on Sunday despite the State's ancient "blue laws."

A hustings court jury here ruled last week that Sunday movies were a "necessity." As a result, more than half of the theaters in the city were open today.

One theater operated at Charlottesville with near capacity audiences attending. Charlottesville officials had announced they would take no action unless charges were brought against the theater.

Filene Quits, Calling C. of C. 'Reactionary'

Trade Body Now a Tool of Special Interests, Founder Asserts.

Wage Rises, Opposed by Group, Are Declared Prosperity Hope.

By the United Press.

Boston, May 24.—Edward A. Filene, 74-year-old internationally known business liberal, and one of the organizers of the United States Chamber of Commerce, tonight accused the organization of being a "potent center of reaction" and announced his resignation.

(At the Chamber of Commerce headquarters here it was said that Filene resigned in April, 1935.)

The ardent supporter of the Democratic Administration, and such labor principles as the 30-hour week, withdrew from the association because, he charged, it has become the tool of "special interests" and refuses to work out an intelligent solution to business problems.

The Boston merchant, who first astounded conservative businessmen 30 years ago by organizing the Filene Employes Association, gave eight reasons for resigning.

Business Men Not Business.

They were:

1. The Chamber of Commerce has become an organization of business men, instead of an organization of business, in order to promote the views of prominent members.

2. It reaches decisions by polling members on the basis of existing opinions without presentation of data unearthed by research.

3. The chamber does not serve the needs of business nor the needs of the average member because of its policy of "adding up the opinions and calling that the answer."

4. The chamber is not a fact-finding organization and therefore cannot serve either the ends of business or the ends of democracy.

5. There never can be prosperity until wages are increased, a policy opposed by the association.

6. The chamber is shrinking in prestige because it is alienating progressive minds.

7. It is a successful business club and a "potent center of reaction" but cannot furnish any real help to business.

8. The chamber is controlled by businesses which profit most from such control, although lacking interest in the needs of business in general.

In an open letter to the president and directors, Filene said, "I cannot continue to work in and through the Chamber of Commerce," but insisted that "I have not lost one iota of interest in the Nation-wide organization of business to advance the interest of business in general."

"That you may not think I am now making any hasty decision," he said, "may I remind you of how I tried to get this basic problem before the Washington meeting in 1934 (the problem of restudying the chamber's form of organization).

Says Hearing Was Denied.

"You will doubtless remember how I failed to get a hearing—how, in spite of the generally recognized new crisis in business, the very suggestion that any new tactics might even be studied was not permitted to be brought before the chamber.

"I have at last been forced to the conclusion that the United States Chamber of Commerce, as at present organized, is not an organization of business but rather an organization of business men—meeting not to study business in a business way, nor even to find out what the needs of business in general may be, but either to promote the special views of certain prominent people in the business world, or at best to discover and express the fixed opinion of the membership concerning matters which, in the most successful modern business organizations, would be preferred as a matter of course to fact-finding research."

Filene said that "there can never again be lasting, Nation-wide prosperity until American business in general is organized to pay such higher wages that the masses of wage earners will be able to buy enough of our industrial products to give our industries an adequate market and thus keep them in profitable operation."

"It was not, therefore, because I found myself so hopelessly outnumbered in the United States Chamber of Commerce that I finally decided to withdraw my support, but because the chamber had neither the facilities nor the will to find the actual answer to such an all-important question," he said.

Omaha Held So Dry Bar Girls Kill Selves

Bar maids are committing suicide in Omaha because dry Nebraskans won't take to their cups, Dr. F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, reported yesterday.

"There are said to be 750 bar maids in Omaha alone who get 10 cents for each drink they induce men to buy," McBride, just back from an investigation tour of 36 States, told the congregation at Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church. "Recently two of these girls committed suicide, leaving notes to say the life was too hard."

The dry leader said that during his 85,000-mile tour he found that honest officials despair of ever controlling the liquor traffic, that the saloon is back and bootlegging continues.

Still Hell Bent

By James P. Warburg
Author of "Hell Bent for Election," Formerly One of President Roosevelt's Financial Advisers.

Chapter Two.

A Story About Green Apples.

The first of the three widely held convictions, which I have said must be shown to be based upon misconception, if Mr. Roosevelt is to be defeated this autumn, is this:

"I don't think much of most of the New Deal policies. In fact, I don't much like the whole New Deal, but I like even less going back to what we had before the New Deal began. And, as that seems to be the choice, I'd rather string along with Roosevelt than go back to conditions as they were in the last Republican Administration."

Unless I am very much mistaken, that is about the way many people feel who are neither out-and-out New Dealers nor dyed-in-the-wool Republicans. And, if that be true, then I should think that we have here the feeling of a very large section of the American population.

Is it a conclusion warranted by the actual facts?

To my mind it is not, for a number of reasons.

In the first place, it is a misconception to think that the alternative to another four years of Roosevelt-ian New Deal is a return to conditions as they existed under Mr. Hoover. Even if the Republican Party proposed to go back to things as they were, say in 1928, and even if its candidate were elected on that platform, it could not possibly carry out its purpose.

Not if every man, woman and child in the United States rolled up their sleeves and tried to help in accomplishing it. . . .

The world moves forward—not back. It is impossible ever to reproduce any complete set of circumstances, particularly circumstances which were largely shaped by a world-wide upheaval such as the great war.

But no one seriously thinks of

4 Are Drowned As Boat Upsets; One Is Rescued

Survivor Found Clinging to Sloop in Lake St. Clair Tells of Tragedy.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 24.—An overturned sloop was found drifting in Lake St. Clair with one man clinging to it late today. The survivor, Elmer Reagin, 28, said his four companions drowned last night.

Reagin, of Detroit, taken ashore at Belle River, Ontario, said the victims were William Barlow, 22, owner of the craft; Arnold Woll, 33; Clifford McLeod, 28, and Philip Brinkus, 25, all of Detroit.

N. P. Neff, of Grosse Pointe, Mich., member of a rescue party which put out after the overturned boat and was sighted by an airplane pilot, said Reagin told him Barlow drowned himself deliberately in a fit of remorse after the sloop capsized, and that the others slipped from the overturned boat during the night.

"Reagin told us Barlow became hysterical after the boat capsized and insisted he was going to end his life because he was responsible for the tragedy," Neff said.

The homemade, 24-foot sailing vessel, with its five passengers, put out yesterday afternoon for Detroit.

Neff said Reagin told him it became apparent soon after reaching the open water of Lake St. Clair, where a high wind was blowing, that the craft was overloaded.

It capsized about 3 miles from the Canadian shore about dusk.

Families of the five men asked police today to search for them.

An airplane pilot put out from Selfridge Field this afternoon to scan the lake from the sky. He sighted the overturned boat and notified searchers, who reached it from shore.

One body, believed to be that of Barlow, was recovered.

Mrs. O'Leary Dies; Manslaughter Cited

Mrs. Zella Brown O'Leary, 43, wife of William J. O'Leary, of the Bureau of Public Roads, Department of Agriculture, died yesterday morning at Fort Lauderdale, Fla. According to authorities there, her death came after she had been burned in a machine in a sunbath treatment sanitarium.

As the result of her death, a man listed as P. E. Dettra, was arrested in Fort Lauderdale and charged with manslaughter, the Associated Press reported.

Mrs. O'Leary, a resident of Chevy Chase, Md., for the last 15 years, went to Florida last December in an effort to improve her health. She was believed to be recovering.

Besides her husband who has been residing at 7 Blackthorn street, Chevy Chase, Mrs. O'Leary is survived by two daughters, Mrs. John C. Sleman, of Kensington, Md., and Mrs. Sidney Gerbich, of Philadelphia.

Six Are Injured As Blasts Raze Fireworks Shop

Dog's Bark Arouses Owner; Wife Hurt in Leap; Entire Neighborhood Jarred.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 24.—The Elmont Fireworks Co., on Long Island, blew up in a series of spectacular explosions today that jarred houses for miles around and caused injuries to six persons.

Anthony Friedman, 34, was burned seriously by the flames, which destroyed the company's five storage buildings and workshop in the village of Elmont.

Mrs. Mary Lanzetta, wife of the proprietor, suffered a fracture of the right ankle when she jumped from the second floor of their home, which adjoins the plant. Her husband, Anthony, and three volunteer firemen were burned.

Lanzetta said he was aroused shortly after dawn by the barking of his dog and looked out of the window to see his workshop in flames. The fire spread quickly, setting off giant pieces of display fireworks and cannisters of propelling powder.

Members of the Elmont Volunteer Fire Department, jarred from their beds by the blasts, arrived with five pieces of apparatus.

With Roman candles and aerial bombs bursting all around, firemen confined their activities to preventing the spread of flames to nearby houses.

Three miles away, Capt. Vincent Chimenti, Nassau County policeman, was bounced out of bed by a heavy detonation.

The blasts continued for ten minutes, shattering windows for blocks around.

Detective Lieut. Albert Pitt, Bureau of Explosives, said neighbors had complained the fireworks company was a menace and declared he would investigate the possibility of incendiarism.

Fake Police Trio Robs Autoist of $8

A man robbed of $8 in bills early yesterday by three men who approached him posing as policemen.

Kael H. Williams, of 1400 E street southeast, reported to police three men drove up in a car while he was parked on Thirty-eighth street southeast, demanded to see his driving permit, telling him they were policemen.

Williams said he handed the men his purse. One of the men took the billfold, leaped into the car and told Williams he was going to drive him to the Eleventh Precinct. At Minnesota and Pennsylvania avenues the man jumped out, ran back to the other car and disappeared.

Frederick Moss, Negro, 1719 Ninth street northwest, was robbed of $2.50 by three Negroes who seized him while he was walking on Tenth street northwest near French street. Moss said the men threw him to the ground and went through his pockets.

Hottest Sunday Draws Crowds To D. C. Parks and Boulevards

Washingtonians by the thousands answered the urge to be outdoors yesterday on a perfect day in May.

It was the hottest Sunday of the year thus far, the temperature climbing to 90 degrees shortly before 4 p. m. Only once before this season had the mercury reached that mark. That was on Tuesday, May 11.

The weatherman expects it will be considerably cooler today and indicates he will be surprised if there aren't some showers before night.

A vigorous breeze made yesterday comfortable in spite of the heat. The temperature, however, was high even in the earliest hours. A minimum of 58 was recorded at 6 a. m.

It was a rare, fine day, and from mid-morning until long after sundown crowds filled parks, roadways and every available open space.

Many did nothing more strenuous than squint at the glaring sky and shoo flies from the picnic lunch.

But most of those who luxuriated in the glorious weather worked harder at playing than they do at their regular jobs during the week. They hiked, they skated, they rode, cycled and sailed. They played tennis and golf and baseball. About the only thing they didn't do was swim. A few hardy souls splashed around in the cold waters of the Potomac, but most were content to wait until the opening of some of the pools on Wednesday.

Spring fever yesterday induced women in gaudy shorts and bandanna headdresses to go wobbling around Hains Point promenade on unsteady bicycles. It made customary casual strolls by young couples along the sea wall suddenly significant.

It brought out more than the usual number of fishermen, who leaned patiently and futilely over the water hour after hour without getting so much as a nibble.

And, not content with upsetting

British Navy To Build New African Base To Curb Italy

Cape Town May Become New Principal Outlet for Trade Ships.

Heavy Guns Set Up At Robben Island

Il Duce Warns Powers Nation Will Defend New Territory.

By the United Press.

Cape Town, South Africa, May 24. Extensive plans to make Cape Town an important British naval base as result of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia were revealed tonight.

The port also may become the new principal gateway to the Far East for British commercial vessels.

Officials pointed out that Italy's conquest of Ethiopia gives the Fascist state a dominant position in the Mediterranean. In case of conflict with Britain, Italy might be able to choke the empire's life-line of communications which runs through the Mediterranean.

Thus, development of a second route to India and the Far East was deemed strategic and necessary, they said.

Minister to Sail Soon.

O. Pirow, minister of defense for the Union of South Africa, will sail for London shortly to discuss defense problems with imperial authorities.

The harbor will need considerable widening and dredging to accommodate the largest ships of His Majesty's fleet.

Plans call for Robben Island, about 10 miles out in Table Bay, to be converted into a harbor defense fortress.

It was reported that heavy guns already are being mounted on Robben Island at a cost of $500,000.

No statement has been made regarding the expense of converting the harbor into a naval base, but it is assumed the imperial government will stand a large percentage of it.

Il Duce Warns Powers.

By the United Press.

Rome, May 24.—Commemorating the twenty-first anniversary of Italy's entry into the World War, Premier Benito Mussolini today warned the powers that Italy is again ready to go to war if necessary to defend her newly acquired East African empire.

Recalling that Italy failed to share fruits of the allied victory in the great war, which cost Italy 680,000 men killed and 1,588,000 permanently maimed, Il Duce said:

"We are relying on the youth of today to defend our empire. They must and will be invincible."

Mussolini spoke from the balcony of Palazzo Venezia to thousands of his own Ballila boys, girl Fascists and Vanguardistas. More than 831,000 youths entered Il Duce's Fascist youth organizations or were promoted into the super-Black Shirt organizations in honor of the day.

Wounds Believed Healed.

The feeling predominating throughout Italy was that conquest of Ethiopia and creation of a new Roman Empire had healed Italy's World War wounds.

Before speaking, Mussolini, astride a chestnut charger, reviewed a huge "victory parade." Similar ceremonies were held all over the peninsula.

Il Duce showed defiance and a certain amount of contempt for the nations which have refused to recognize the new Italian empire, and reiterated that Italy will never give up an inch of soil without a great struggle.

Greeting war veterans and young Fascists who marched along Corso Umberto to pay homage at the tomb of the unknown soldier, Mussolini said:

"I ask you, have we shot straight so far?"

The throng answered with a thunderous "yes."

"Then, today, May 24, I promise you we will continue to do so in the future."

Later, Il Duce inaugurated a highway in suburban Rome and then witnessed collective exercises by the Ballila boys.

The press emphasized the "might of imperial Italy" in editorials and made scathing references to the present alignment of France, Great Britain and other sanctionist powers against Italy.

Newspapers recalled the huge Italian losses "for a common cause" fighting against the Central Powers, and added that "today Italy's former allies appear to have forgotten."

Giornale d'Italia, Mussolini's sounding board, said that only by a constant display of her might does Italy feel she is able to maintain the position which 14 years of Fascism have gained.

Congress Acts To Clear Slate Before June 9

Tax, Relief Bills Remain as Barriers to Adjourning by Convention Date.

By the Associated Press.

With Senate committees about ready to report the vital tax and relief bills, Congressional leaders set out last night on a two-weeks' drive to clean up the session's program and adjourn before the Republican National convention.

Members of both parties joined in striving for that goal, but many conceded its achievement was far from assured.

Administration pilots conferred over the week-end in an effort to smooth the way for quick committee action on the two all-important measures for raising new revenue and providing for next year's relief program.

Chairman Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, hoped to get a favorable report from his finance committee today on the compromise tax program, but others on the committee forecast it would be two or three days before the bill would reach the Senate.

By that time leaders hoped the $2,384,000,000 relief-deficiency appropriation bill would be out of the Appropriations Committee and ready for Senate action. The subcommittee was expected to act today and the full committee tomorrow.

Opposition Expected.

Republican forces were organizing to oppose or attempt to modify both measures on the Senate floor, but Administration chieftains were confident they had the votes to push both bills through to passage.

A fresh Republican attack on the tax bill came yesterday from Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, who characterized it as "an assault on thrift and prudence."

"Any punitive tax on undistributed earnings is inevitably an assault on thrift and prudence," he said. "I still believe that thrift and prudence are prime essentials to stabilized economic recovery, particularly if the Government would practice a little of it itself.

"Secondly, I simply cannot consent to an amazingly blind and destructive procedure which concentrates all congressional attention upon raising $600,000,000 more in taxes and completely ignores the comparatively easy alternative of saving $600,000,000 by economies and elimination and by substituting a rational relief formula."

Vandenberg was ready to oppose the tax bill and seek to decentralize relief. He already has presented an amendment which would turn administration of the relief program back to the States and require them to participate in bearing the costs.

Democrats, however, were uniting behind the Finance Committee tax compromise to levy a flat 18 per cent tax on corporate income, with a 7 per cent surtax on indistributed earnings and application of the normal income tax rate of 4 per cent to all dividends.

They were working also toward a compromise on the relief issue which would give the Works Progress Administration the $1,425,000,000 appropriated by the House and provide additional funds for continuing the Public Works Administration.

Rejects Fund Demand.

The House turned down demands for new funds for the PWA, but Administratoin Senators were shaping a proposal to make available part or all of a $400,000,000 revolving loan fund as a new appropriation to carry on the Public Works construction program.

Administration chieftains hoped these compromises would make it possible to wind up the session by the end of next week. At the same time they planned for recesses during the conventions if the hoped-for adjournment does ont materialize.

In that event leaders hoped at least to get the two bills through the Senate, and into conference with the House, so the conferees could be working toward an agreement during the convention recess. This might prevent a prolonged session after the convenions.

Today the Senate takes up the last of the measures scheduled for consideration at this session outside of relief and taxes—the commodity exchange bill. An attempt will be made to pass it before the relief bill debate starts.

The House will take up chain store legislation tomorrow.

Roosevelt Re-election Chances Still Bright But Republicans Profit by Three Breaks.

By Franklyn Waltman

ALTHOUGH President Roosevelt's re-election prospects remain bright and many observers cannot see how he can be defeated, the Republicans have every right to take joy out of three events last week which will have a more or less important bearing on the outcome of the November election.

First came the Supreme Court decision declaring unconstitutional the Guffey coal conservation act; second was the announcement of Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York that he would not be a candidate for re-election; third was the blunder of Democratic Chairman James A. Farley in speaking slightingly about the Prairie States.

None of these events did the Democratic cause any good. How much damage they have done to President Roosevelt's chances cannot be ascertained yet. That depends on the reaction which flows from each event—and, in part, on the way in which the Republicans take advantage of openings. But this trio of events demonstrates how things quickly may happen that will influence the November election. It is still possible that the New Dealers have become cocky too soon.

* * *

In the cast of the Guffey decision, the Democratic cause suffered through another illustration of its unconstitutional actions. But more than that, the court's majority decision clearly indicated that it is not possible for Mr. Roosevelt legally to put into force the degree of Federal control over economic problems that he wishes without amending the Constitution.

Either the President must abandon the objectives of the New Deal as originally conceived in the spring of 1933, or he must press ahead for a constitutional amendment. Both courses are perilous from a political viewpoint. The expectation is that Mr. Roosevelt will try to postpone his decision until after his re-election.

But perhaps the labor leaders who have been flocking to his standard will not let him do that. Labor leaders like John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, know that this issue must be brought to a head soon or late—and the quicker the better if labor is to win the constitutional amendment which it wants, some observers believe.

Had Congress submitted a constitutional amendment to the Nation in 1933 which would give the Federal Government power to deal with broad national and social problems—assuming that such an amendment could be written without destroying State sovereignty completely—it undoubtedly would have received more support at that time than it would now.

Whether such an amendment could have been ratified in 1933 or 1934, of course, remains anyone's guess. But there was more sympathy for such action in 1933 than there is today—and there is probably more sympathy today for such action than there will be next year or in 1938. In other words, as the country emerges from the depression, there is increasing support for the status quo and established institutions.

* * *

Such reasoning accounts for the attitude of those who think the sooner the effort to amend the Constitution is made the better are the chances for success. But there is no doubt that if the President espoused a constitutional amendment in this election he would give the Republicans the ammunition they desire.

On the other hand, if the President does not move toward a constitutional amendment, some of his followers may lose their enthusiasm for him—even if they do not create dissension at Philadelphia by demanding that the party go on record in favor of such action. It is a thorny problem which may lose the President votes despite how he turns.

* * *

The announced intention of Gov. Lehman to retire has greatly altered the political outlook in New York. Several weeks ago that State was regarded as safely in Mr. Roosevelt's column by one of the keenest political observers in New York. Most observers today agree that New York now is a doubtful State and that unless the Democrats show unusual sagacity in nominating a successor to Gov. Lehman the State will be lost to President Roosevelt.

The incident already has done much to improve Republican morale, not only in New York but elsewhere. New York Republicans have been badly demoralized for several years. But the announcement of Gov. Lehman created for them the first glimmering of hope they have had in some time that they might capture the governorship as well as give a Republican Presidential candidate a majority vote.

And let it be remembered that despite all the strategems worked out on paper, it is difficult to win the Presidency without New York's huge bloc of electoral votes. It is true Woodrow Wilson did it in 1916—but he carried Ohio, without which he would have lost—and the odds are against Mr. Roosevelt carrying Ohio this year.

* * *

Mr. Farley's remark at Grand Rapids might not cause any substantial shift of voters in the election, but it is bound to have some effect in the Mississippi Valley States, which incidentally are becoming more doubtful every day. Taking last week, all in all, the Republicans got the breaks—and they need them.

"9. If you, yourself, claim detachment from politics and do not admit that the impulse for this poisonous use of public money for political purposes comes from your office, who is it—or what influence is it in the Washington Government—that is supplying the motivation for this poitical debauchery and for the starvation of American citizens whose manhood and womanhood will not permit them to become slaves to a politically administered relief system which offers them food at the price of liberty?"

Gives Actual Incidents.

Curtis gave "names, dates, places and actual incidents" previously requested by Hopkins. His first exhibit was a list of delegates participating in a recent meeting of the Green County Democratic committee at Springfield, Mo., showing that this was composed entirely of WPA officials, workers or their relatives.

Curtis cited letter after letter showing loss of jobs by WPA workers for refusing to register or vote Democratic. He said all the letters were voluntary.

Curtis produced a letter written by George Bartholmaeus, former editor of the Missouri Review, in which he said solicitors for the paper had obtained 1,500 subscriptions from relief workers on the strength of a letter written by a political worker.

Borah Address Will Feature Week in G. O. P.

Observers to Scan Thursday Talk for Indication of Convention Trend.

By the Associated Press.

As Republicans girded themselves last night for clash at Cleveland 16 days hence, party observers turned their attention to the forthcoming address of Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, Thursday, which is looked upon as the week's high spot in the political whirl.

With only 63 Presidential nominating delegates still to be chosen, and they unlikely to bring any radical shift in alignments, speculation was open that the half-century Republican trand of nomination on the first ballot might again be dented.

Spokesmen for Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas were on record with a claim of "better than 300 on the first ballot."

At the same time, managers for Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, asserted he would have "the largest solid block" of votes and was assured of a 230-delegate following at the outset.

Borah's Following.

Backers of Senator Borah, have been less specific in speaking of their candidate's convention strength, but undoubtedly the Senator will have a following that will make itself heard.

Only in 1916 when the now Chief Justice, Charles Evans Hughes, was chosen on the third ballot, and in 1920, when Warren G. Harding won on the tenth, has the Republican first ballot trend been broken since 1888.

As for the immediate situation in the week ahead, observers focused on a speech by Senator Borah Thursday. One of the Idahoan's campaign managers has asserted that he would speak out against Gov. Landon if the Senator himself did not.

Some of those close to Borah predicted yesterday he would not mention the Kansan in his address, but his words will be scanned colsely nevertheless for any statement that would bear upon the Cleveland balloting and what will follow after.

Lehman In Picture.

Another focal point of interest was the Democratic situation in New York State. What success, if any, President Roosevelt will have in carrying out his wish to have Gov. Herbert Lehman run for re-election conceivably might influence the Presidential voting in the Empire State.

This week, as far as the choosing of convention delegates is concerned, will be compaartively quiet. North Dakota Republicans meet in convention today to chose eight delegates at large.

Tomorrow Texas Democrats and Republicans will hold conventions. Democratic leaders hope mainly for harmony in choosing the 46 Texas delegates, as the 904 votes thus far drawn for the Philadelphia national convention already have assured President Roosevelt's renomination beyond any chance of a mathematical reverse.

25 Texas Delegates.

Texas Republicans will choose 25 delegates. R. B. Creager, Republican committeeman for the Lone Star State, said that while he believed sentiment among Republicans in his State was for Gov. Landon at the present time, they were of "open mind" and probably would send an uninstructed delegation to Cleveland to vote under the unit rule.

Only one other Republican convention will remain after midweek. On June 3, with the preliminaries of the Cleveland conclave already under way, Indiana Republicans will gather to choose 28 delegates. Some Hoosier observers have predicted an uninstructed delegation, with Landon, Borah and Knox favored in that order.

Two Repubican convention votes to be drawn in Puerto Rico at a date still unset will complete the 1,001 delegate list for the convention.

'Left' in Control Of Democrats In Coast Rally

Four Gavels Worn Out in Riotous Washington State Convention.

By the Associated Press.

Aberdeen, Wash., May 24.—After a wild all-night session, self-styled "Left Wingers" stampeded the Washington State Democratic convention today, seized control and put through their own program, including advocacy of a referendum on judicial decisions.

The convention was in such an uproar it forgot to specifically instruct its 16 delegates to vote for President Franklin D. Roosevelt at the national convention next month.

Four gavels were worn out during the uproarious proceedings of 20 hours during which three presiding officers were exhausted. After the fourth gavel broke, the sergeant-at-arms was sent out to cut a limb from a tree and fashion a club.

Platform planks adopted included:

Two advocating taking over of idle industries by the State on a "production-for-use" basis.

Indorsement of the McGroarty plan for $50 a month stipends for the aged.

For amendment of the Federal Constitution to permit a referendum on judicial decisions.

For public ownership and operation of national resources, munition plants and public utilities and supervision of all basic industries.

Reassertion of the "rights of Congress to coin money and regulate the value thereof to the end that it establish Federal ownership and operation of national banks."

The preamble to the platform, dedicated the efforts of the State's Democrats to the re-election of President Roosevelt.

G.O.P. Fight Due In North Dakota

Jamestown, N. Dak., May 24 (AP). North Dakota Republicans prepared tonight for a party convention tomorrow which was expected to result in a skirmish between forces of Gov. Walter Welford and former Gov. William Langer for control of party affairs.

Eight delegates to the national Republican convention will be selected, but leaders of both factions of the Nonpartisan League, itself a Republican group, and independent Republicans have predicted they would not be pledged to any Presidential candidate.

In addition to the naming of delegates, a slate of Presidential electors will be nominated to be voted on at the June 24 primary election, and a national committeeman and committeewoman will be elected.

Both the Welford and Langer factions of the Nonpartisan League have held conventions at which slates of candidates were indorsed, headed by the two as gubernatorial candidates. The independent Republicans held no convention this year.

Rail Opposition To Co-ordinator Gains in Force

Labor, Management Groups Reported Against Eastman Job Extension.

By the Associated Press.

Opposition to extension of the office of transportation co-ordinator was reported in rail circles yesterday, but Congressional backers of a move to continue it said they would nevertheless go ahead with their plans.

The office, held by Joseph B. Eastman, is scheduled to expire June 16. Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, has announced he will introduce a resolution to continue it for two years and President Roosevelt has expressed approval of some of its activities.

Reports were that rail management and labor, both of which have opposed some of Eastman's activities in the past, might join in an effort to block extension.

Eastman, who has recommended that the office be continued for at least five years, declined comment on the reports except to say he had "heard nothing substantial."

"I am in favor of extending the office," Wheeler said, adding he did not know what the sentiment was in other quarters.

Eastman announced last February he would exercise his powers to compel railroads in 11 cities to carry out terminal unifications as economy and efficiency moves. He withheld the orders at the suggestion of President Roosevelt, however, to permit rail management and labor to agree on some plan of protection for employes thrown out of work in such consolidations.

After negotiating intermittently for three months, the two groups agreed on a plan of dismissal compensatoin last week.

Eastman said yesterday that despite the arrangement for protecting employes he would not issue the orders until there is a Congressional decision as to whether his office will be continued. If it is not, the orders are expected to be discarded.

Eastman said he had arranged the work of his office so that it either could be terminated on June 16 or carried on without interruption beyond that date.

3d Party May Fail To Name Nominee

St. Paul, Minn., May 24 (AP).—Howard Y. Williams, national organizer for the Farmer-Labor Party, today said that, barring "something unusual," a Presidential candidate would not be consideredat the national "Third Party" Conference in Chicago May 30 and 31.

He sad the 100 State political party and union delegates would concentrate on Congressional and Senatorial indorsements.

"The general feeling is that there will not be a third party Presidential candidate," Williams explained. "One reason is the indorsement of Roosevelt by the Labor Nonpartisan League, representing big unions However, a lot depends on developments at the major conventions and something unusual might call for a change."

Lacking such developments, the organizer asserted the conference would "set up an organization that will concentrate on the congressional election this year and be ready for a Presidential ticket in 1940."

50 Deaths Laid To Black Legion As Net Widens

Membership of 135,000 in Michigan Reported for Murder Cult.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 24.—The roundup of "Night riders" of the hooded Black legion spread today as officials directed their inquiry to reports a membership totaling 135,000 in Michigan alone may be responsible for some 50 deaths.

In Detroit Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea said murder warrants would be issued tomorrow for seven men present at the killing of Charles A. Poole, young WPA worker, and said the prosecution would include as many as may be identified of some 50 persons present at a Black Legion meeting from which Poole, a non-member, was taken to his death.

Ray Ernest, guard at the Southern Michigan Prison, was held at Jackson for arraignment Monday on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, after he denied connection with the reported flogging of Paul Every, 42, also a prison guard, and who died April 14 of what physicians pronounced heart disease and diabetes.

State Police Capt. Ira H. Marmon, whose troopers have been investigating the secret vigilantes for months, said he was investigating a report 50 Michigan men had been marked for death, and that the Black Legion made its killings appear suicidal.

Harry Colburn, investigator for the Wayne County prosecutor's office, said he was informed the Black Legion's membership in the State grew in three years to 135,000, divided into five brigades of 16 regiments each, that each member carried a pistol, and that the organization "is much more dangerous than people think."

Claims in Black Legion literature seized by State police that it antedates the Ku Klux Klan and that the Klan was an offshoot from it were ridiculed by investigators, who said the claims were made to impress prospective members. At New York, Hiram W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Klan, indignantly denied any connection with the legion and said the Klan has no affiliates and was firmly aligned on the side of law and order.

Detroit police, who seized 18 men after an investigation into the shooting of Poole on a lonely road near Dearborn, released three who said they did not attend the Black Legion meeting that preceded it. Hearing on habeas corpus writs for 15 others was set for Monday before Circuit Judge Adolph F. Marschner.

Auto Trade Plank Sought of G. O. P.

Detroit, May 24.—Alvan Macauley, president of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, asked delegates to the Republican National Convention today to write into the party's platform a plank approving the principles of reciprocal trade agreements with foreign countries.

He said the Democratic Party already is on record as approving the agreements, and that Republican indorsement would make the tariff issue a nonpartisan economic question.

Macauley said the policy of negotiating reciprocal trade agreements not only would promote two-way expansion of foreign commerce, but also would benefit domestic production and employment.

"The automobile industry believes in a rational protective tariff policy," Macauley's statement said, "but maintains the view that the tariff policy of the United States should be in harmony with sound economic principles, and predicated upon the two-way expansion of our foreign commerce."

Coney Island Swamped; 'Peeping Toms' Seized

New York, May 24 (U.P.).—Today was the hottest May 24 on record in New York—the temperature reached 86—and:

More than 500,000 people flocked to Coney Island while other hundreds of thousands went to other resorts.

Hundreds of women bathers braved a frigid surf in halter-neck and very scanty two-piece suits, while men appeared shirtless, clad only in trunks.

Alderman Sandy A. Ehrmann announced he would introduce a bill banning bareback bathing.

Forty-five lost children were found by police.

Two boardwalk "Peeping Toms" were arrested.

N. Y. Barbers Predict General Walkout

New York, May 24 (AP).—New York's striking barbers tonight predicted a general walkout in their trade Tuesday with journeymen employed in the financial area expected to join those already picketing in upper Manhattan and the Bronx.

Estimating that 3,100 men were on strike in the Times Square, Bronx and upper Westside areas, Anthony Merlino, union vice president, said 4,500 men who quit their jobs last week returned to work at increased wages and shorter working hours.

Legion to Act Tonight in Flag Salute Incident

Lutke Children, Meanwhile, to Attend School as Usual.

The four Lutke children, of Oxon Hill, Md., who drew State-wide attention when they refused to salute the American Flag at school exercises last week, will go to school as usual today, while various local and State groups consider action.

The youngsters, who come from a family that belongs to "Jehovah's Witnesses," a religious sect, said their allegiance to God prevented them from saluting the flag, symbol of "temporal" authority.

The course of the Upper Marlboro Post of the American Legion, officers of which promised action Saturday, was to have been mapped at a meeting of the post's executive committee yesterday afternoon. Cancellation of that meeting throws the matter before the general meetinf of the post tonight.

Board Will Meet.

The Prince Georges County Board of Education meets tomorrow, and is expected to discuss the Lutke case then. According to the State legislative code, county boards are to use programs in public schools "providing for the salute of the flag." However, board members and Nicholas Orem, county superintendent of schools, said they are at a loss to know if the code covers a case of refusal to salute the flag.

Paul Smith, commander of the county American Legion post, yesterday denied his organization had made any move, either to investigate or act in the case. He said any course must be decided by the post's membership tonight. He admitted, however, that certain members of the legion were agitating some action to compel the Lutke children to salute the flag, or leave school.

Meanwhile, Mr. and Mrs. August A. Lutke, the parents, are backing their children.

Wouldn't Force Salute.

"I would rather take them out of school than have them made to salute the flag," Mrs. Lutke declared yesterday. Both the father, who is a Washington postoffice employe, and the mother have insisted their children acted on their own volition.

The children are Fred, 12; Louise, 10; Walter, 8, and Esther, 7.

State officials of the Maryland State Department, American Legion, indicated Saturday that the case will be taken up at its meeting next month. They intimated it would be a talking point in a second attempt to get a "teacher oath" bill through the Legislature.

British Red Cross Worker Released

London, May 24 (AP).—J. L. Bonner, British Red Cross worker, who had been missing after his reported arrest by Italians in Ethiopia, is now in Djibouti, French Somaliland, said a telegram received today by his mother.

The Reuters (British) news agency reported from Djibouti Bonner declared on his arrival there the Italians who held him at Diredawa, Ethiopia, had tried to get him to admit he was Dr. Rudolph Brunner, a Viennese officer, who served in the Ethiopian army.

Bonner was reported by the Reuters correspondent to have stated he was kept three days with little food and drink. He feared he was going to be shot, this account said, and escaped to the desert, finally reaching a railroad encampment almost dead of thirst and fatigue.

Later he was taken back to Diredawa and jailed until the British consul obtained his release, the Reuters report added.

Fatal Stabbing Puzzles Police; One Youth Held

Incoherent Story Told by Three Companions of Victim, Officers Say.

Prince Georges County police last night held Allie Miles, 19-year-old farm youth of Accokeek, Md., for investigation in the fatal stabbing of Henry Pickrel, 36, on a country roadside near Accokeek late Saturday.

Pickrel, an Accokeek farmer, died of a knife wound in his chest while two police officers, called to the scene, were taking him to a physician at nearby T. B., Md.

Miles was one of three men whom the policemen—Edward Merson and Elon Turner—found at Pickrel's side when they reached the roadside spot.

Unable to get a coherent story from any of the men, who in addition to Allie Miles included his brother, Woodrow Miles, 21, and John W. Penn, 59, police said last night that Allie Miles would be held without a charge being preferred until several points in the investigation are clarified.

One of Trio Held.

The men, prior to the stabbing, had been drinking, police said, and they believe Pickrel was knifed during a roadside brawl.

After taking the body to Upper Marlboro, the officers returned to Accokeek to question Pickrel's companions.

They said the men, under the influence of liquor, could give them only disconnected details.

The four had met early in the evening and spent some time at the home of Jimmy Jennette, they said. They left together late, and took the road on which Pickrel was found.

Yesterday police found a half-pint liquor bottle and a blood-covered pocketknife beside the roadway.

16 Promotions Slated Among Army Leaders

Five to Be Raised to Major General, 11 to Become Brigadiers in Shift.

By the Associated Press.

A reshuffling of the Army's high command—resulting chiefly from retirement of major generals reaching the age limit of service—will create 5 new major generals, 11 new brigadier generals, and a dozen changes in assignments before the end of the year.

The first shift, it was learned last night, will place Maj. Gen. Charles E. Kilbourne, now commanding the second division at San Antonio, Tex., in command of the Sixth Corps Area at Chicago, succeeding Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood.

Hagood, who was sent into military exile for criticizing WPA spending policies, served one day as commanding officer after being restored to active duty and then requested retirement.

Kilbourne recently returned from duty in the Philippines. He previously served as assistant chief of staff in charge of war plans under Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

To Command Big Maneuvers.

At Chicago he will command the big Army maneuvers to be held this summer, with units from the Regular Army and National Guard throughout the Middle West participating. Shortly afterward he will retire upon reaching the age of 64.

Others who will retire before the year ends include Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, who succeeded Hagood as commanding general of the Eighth Corps Area at San Antonio; Maj. Gen. F. C. Bolles, commanding officer of the Seventh Corps Area at Omaha, and Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, now on duty in Panama.

New commanding generals for San Antonio and Omaha are expected to be selected from among the major generals not already assigned to command corps areas.

The five new major generals to be named are to be selected from among the top flight of brigadier generals who still have two years or more to serve before retiring for age.

Under recent Army practice no high-ranking officers are selected for advancement unless they have at least two years to serve in the higher rank.

Brig. Gen. James K. Parsons, commanding Vancouver Barracks, Wash., is now the ranking brigadier.

Brigadier generals who will retire this year include Charles S. Lincoln, assistant chief of staff; Hamilton S. Hawkins, commanding the First Cavalry Division, Fort Bliss, Tex.; James B. Gowen, commanding the Twenty-first Infantry Brigade, Schofield Barracks, Hawaii; Ernest D. Scott, commanding the First Field Artillery Brigade, Fort Hoyle, Md.; Arthur S. Conklin, commanding the First Coast Artillery District, and Casper H. Conrad, commanding the Third Division, Fort Lewis, Wash.

New commanding officers for those units will be selected from among the ranking brigadiers not advanced to the rank of major general.

Hottest Sunday of Year

the placid routine of adults, the malady also struck the children. It lured them from Sunday school rooms into fanciful cathedrals with grass for carpets and fluttering leaves for roofs.

Even fear of reprisals from the hands of parents could not spoil the communion with Nature which 14-year-old Charles Frazier, of 704 Third street northwest, arranged yesterday for several neighborhood children.

It was an impromptu affair. At least it was impromptu for most of the youngsters. They were on their way to Sunday school when Charles, pulling a red wagon filled with a lunch he had fixed himself, suggested they all move on to greener, fairer places.

Spring was on his side of the argument. And so the cavalcade started gayly down the street on a 2-mile walk to a shady spot near the East Potomac Park rose gardens. Sometimes on the long journey the sandwiches and peanuts were pushed to one end of the wagon so little 4-year-old Mae Alice Furr could ride.

The others walked all the way. Mary Furr, 7, and Floyd Brown, 8, admitted afterward that they got "a little bit tired," but they trudged along beside Ellen Furr, 10, and Charles' 9-year-old sister, Hazel.

Once under the cool green trees they peeled off shoes and stockings and perfectly unaware of the amused glances of passing motorists, the youngsters settled down to the meal Charles had prepared.

Charles had planned a full day for his party.

"We're going to stay out until 6 o'clock," he announced.

The Furr children looked dubious—Ellen remembered they were to attend some religious meeting in the afternoon—but when last seen they were on their way to the swings at Hains Point with young Frazier and the little red wagon leading the way. They had succumbed completely to spring fever.

On the point there were hundreds of other victims of the disease—picnic groups, family ball games, merry children tumbling in the grass, young men in bright-hued shirts, pretty girls in slacks or shorts, riding bicycles or skating.

The Washington Channel was crowded with traffic. Speed boats roared over the waters, throwing silvery spray on freshly painted yachts. Laughter and the hum of conversation drifted to shore from their decks. Canoes cut through miniature waves, sailboats sped by, and a big excursion boat went churning down the river.

National Zoological Park had its biggest crowd of the year. The animals, usually the chief attraction, had strong rivals yesterday in verdant sweeps of lawn and refreshing shade cast by ancient trees.

Highways in every direction were jammed. Planes, buses and trains were filled. All Washington was on the go, taking advantage of one of the last Sundays of spring. Within a few weeks the typical cry will be, "My, but it's hot." Yesterday the conversational theme was, "My, but it's fine."

Roosevelt Fails To Call Lehman Into Conference

Apparently Will Let Political Situation Simmer; Aids Baseball Game.

By the United Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., May 24.—President Roosevelt apparently is going to let the New York State political situation simmer for a while before trying to persuade Gov. Herbert H. Lehman to run for re-election.

Such was the opinion tonight after it was reiterated at the summer White House that the President had not invited Lehman to Hyde Park, nor had the latter indicated a wish to confer.

There were reports that both Lehman and Postmaster General James A. Farley would be visitors over the week-end, but these were discounted by Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre, who said the President had no names on the engagement list.

May Act Before September.

Observers, nevertheless, felt that Mr. Roosevelt would act before the September Democratic convention in an effort to put Lehman, to whom he has referred as "my good right arm," on the record in the affirmative so far as participation in the next campaign is concerned.

Lehman's presence in the forthcoming race would go a long way toward cinching the State's 47 electoral votes for the President, it was argued, as there has been no one, at least in recent years, who measures up to his ability as a vote getter.

Then too, the nomination of a comparatively unknown candidate, such as Robert H. Jackson, of Jamestown, would require a "build-up" in greater New York and perhaps throw a tremendous vote to tried Republican war horses whose names are a by-word, particularly in the up-State area.

Party leaders are desirous of preserving the up-State gains and feel that they will be needed when noses are counted even in the event Lehman changes his mind and consents to run.

Loss of State Threatened.

Back of the whole situation, however, remains the threat of the loss of the State to the Republicans unless a powerful and popular figure is on the ticket.

The psychological effect of waiting until September in a pivotal State like New York, it was asserted, might be bad from the political point of view in other sections and at the same time lead to dissension in ranks that must be solidified for the big push.

The President, meanwhile, spent a quiet Sunday at Hyde Park, on the surface undisturbed by the crisis in his home State.

In the morning he attended services at St. James Episcopal Church, at Hyde Park. On arrival he found 175 war veterans participating in a memorial service to the war dead in the nearby church cemetery. They assembled to salute him and he hastened to pay tribute to their devotion.

"Such activity makes for good citizenship," he explained.

After luncheon, the President drove to Krum Field, in Hyde Park Village, where he pitched out the opening ball to officially start the baseball season in his village. The game was between Hyde Park and Columbiaville.

Introduced as Great Pitcher.

Watson Golden, manager of the Hyde Park team, introduced Mr. Roosevelt, and added: "President Roosevelt is the greatest pitcher in the United States. He's got a lot on the ball. He's making a lot of home runs and his batting average is 1,000 per cent."

Mr. Roosevelt then responded:

"I used to play ball with Arthur 'Rube' De Groff, of the Hyde Park team, about 28 years ago. We used to win games then, and we're still winning them."

The President watched about three innings of play from his automobile and then departed.

His schedule calls for departure from Hyde Park tomorrow night for Washington.

Still Hell Bent

Mr. Hoover as wanting to reproduce the conditions of 1928—much less the conditions of the four years that followed. No one seriously thinks of the Republican Party as wanting to do anything so palpably absurd.

What is it, then, that makes the average citizen so reluctant to follow the only path one can follow, if one desires to vote against a continuation of Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal?

It is partly, I think, a feeling that Republican mismanagement caused the depression, and that New Deal management has at least to some extent got us out of it.

It is partly, I think, a feeling that the Republican Party stands for the interests of the privileged few, while the New Deal, with all its faults, stands for the underprivileged many.

These two elements you will recognize as the same in substance—although stated a little differently—as the second and third widespread convictions which I stated at the outset. I shall deal with them in subsequent articles.

But there is a third element, it seems to me, that contributes toward the average citizen's reluctance to vote the Republican ticket. With this third element I should like to deal briefly here.

I should define it as a confusion between returning to certain principles of government and economics, and returning to certain economic conditions which prevailed before these principles were abandoned.

To illustrate what I mean:

A little boy of 3 or 4 is very fond of visiting some friends of his mother and playing with their little girl, who is about his own age. He goes there often and feels very much at home. One day the little girl and he find some lovely-looking green apples under a tree. They eat them and get painfully and violently sick. The little boy is taken home and put to bed. He has his first disagreeable experience of castor oil, and for several days thereafter feels seedy.

After a while, when he is up and about, his mother suggests taking him over to see the little girl. Much to her surprise he is violently upset, cries, and doesn't want to go.

The mother, if she is wise, realizes what the trouble is.

The stomach-ache and castor oil have become associated in the mind of her boy with going to see his little friend.

That, I think, is precisely what has happened to most of us.

Confusing Illness With Old System.

Because, under a free enterprise system we ate green apples, got sick, and had to take castor oil, we associate these unpleasant experiences with a free enterprise system.

We forget that no system has yet been devised—even under Mr. Roosevelt—which will permit us to eat green apples without taking the consequences. And thus, knowing that we do not like the New Deal because we know in our hearts that it is unsound, we are afraid to go back to what we know are sound principles, because we do not realize that going back to those principles does not mean that we have to go back to eating green apples.

The point I am trying to make is this:

Our trouble was not the system under which we lived, but the abuses we committed and permitted under that system.

Mr. Roosevelt recognized many of these abuses, though by no means all of them. Some of them he has remedied, or partially remedied. Others he has made worse rather than better. We shall discuss this more fully when we come to analyze the justification for supporting Mr. Roosevelt "because he has at least tried, and, if re-elected, will keep on trying."

But the point in which we are interested here is, that practically all of Mr. Roosevelt's remedies—whether successful or unsuccessful—involved basic changes in the system, rather than corrective measures within the system.

A year ago it would have been necessary to pause here and prove this statement. Today it is no longer necessary.

People realize today that Government control of industry and agriculture are a basic change from a free enterprise order.

Those who like it realize it, as do those who dislike it.

And people realize today that government by the Executive is different from government by Congress and the Executive.

Opinions differ as to whether these changes are by conscious design or by accident.

Battle Cry Reveals Purpose as Change.

The fact that Mr. Roosevelt chose as his battle cry the slogan of a "New Deal"—the fact that he has boasted only recently of having "created new instruments of public power"—the fact that he speaks constantly of "a new order," "a new philosophy," and so forth—all these things would indicate that the basic change is by conscious design.

On the other hand, the President and his supporters are loud in their insistence that what they did was forced upon them by necessity.

I do not think it matters a great deal which is the case.

What matters is that a great majority of the American people do not want basic changes in the system; they want corrections of abuse within the system.

They have not yet realized that the two are not inseparable.

The little boy can perfectly well visit the little girl and still remember the painful lesson he learned about green apples.

What Mr. Roosevelt has done to us is what the mother of the little boy would have done, had she said:

"Johnnie, you must never go and visit Annie again, because if you do, you will get a stomach-ache and I shall have to take you home and give you castor oil."

I do not think we need to be afraid to visit Annie.

I do not think we need to be afraid to vote the Republican ticket for fear "lest we go back to what we had before the New Deal began."

But I do think we must remember about green apples.

Germans Awarded Contract in Italy

Berlin, May 24 (AP).—Efforts of German industrialists to put themselves in a position to share in the profits of Italy's progra. of expansion were seen today in an announcement the Rheinmetallborsig Co. has been given a contract to build a 3,500,000-mark (about $1,400,000) oil refinery for a corporation at Trieste.

This is the first time any German firm has been given a chance to build a big refinery abroad. British and American firms heretofore have been enjoying a practical monopoly in such business.

The new refinery will have a capacity of 300,000 tons annually and is designed to help make Italy independent of foreign motor fuel.

Gold Standard Urged in Plank Of G.O.P. Clubs

New York Groups Also Propose End of Farm Regulation.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 24.—Resumed gold redemption of currency and abandonment of all plans to restrict agricultural production were among the planks of a proposed Republican platform announced tonight by a joint committee of five New York Republican clubs.

Before submission to the party's national convention at Cleveland next month, Chairman A. Perry Osborne said, the draft would be submitted for ratification by the National Republican Club, Inc., the Women's National Republican Club, Inc., the New York Young Republican Club, the National Republican Builders, Inc., and the Young Women's Republican Club of New York, its sponsors.

The proposed plank on Government finance advocated:

"Economy in Government and a balanced Federal budget; revision of the Federal tax system and reduction of the burden of indirect taxes upon persons of small income; a sound currency, convertible into gold at a rate subject to change only by Congress; establishment of an adequate bank credit and currency system based on the recommendations of an expert nonpolitical commission."

The plank on agriculture urged:

Removal of all restrictions on agricultural production; restoration of the domestic market to the American farmer; Government aid in the marketing of farm surpluses."

For re-employment, the proposed platform urged "co-operation of Government with agriculture, industry and labor in providing jobs."

It proposed relief be handled locally, with Federal loans to help States unable to bear the cost, and a locally administered housing program aided by Federal funds.

For business the committee suggested formation of "voluntary trade associations, subject to Federal Trade Commission regulation, to permit organized business to agree on standards of employment and fair competition."

Other planks dealt with labor, social security, tariff, conservation, foreign affairs and administration.

Canadian Killer Slain in Holdup

Sarnia, Ontario, May 24 (AP).—The career of Norman F. (Red) Ryan, Canada's most notorious bank robber and killer, was ended today after he shot a constable to death in a liquor store robbery and then with a companion fell fatally wounded under a fusillade of police bullets.

Only ten months ago Ryan was paroled from the Kingston Penitentiary, promising to "go straight." Police said he kept to his oath until last night, when he and his unidentified companion entered the small Ontario liquor control board store a block off Sarnia's main business street.

The first of the officers to enter the store in response to a holdup alarm, Constable John Lewis, the father of two children, was shot down by Ryan, according to Chief of Police William J. Lannin.

But two other policemen—Patrol Sergt. George Smith and Detective Frank McGirr—shot it out with Ryan and his partner, while 25 terrified customers and store employes looked on. Ryan's partner was killed also.

Townsend Bloc Defiant; House Citation Nears

Action Against OARP Chief Due This Week; Downey Denies Bell Charges.

By Felix Bruner.

With Dr. Francis E. Townsend, originator of the old-age pension plan which would give everybody over 60 years of age $200 a month, almost certain to be cited for contempt of the House this week, he and members of his organization maintained their defiant attitude yesterday.

The House committee investigating old-age pension plans will decide tomorrow what procedure to take in punishing the 70-year-old doctor for walking out of the committee hearing after refusing to answer further questions, thusoffending the dignity of the committee and of the House.

Sheridan Downey, attorney for Old-Age Revolving Pensions, Inc., the Townsend organization, issued a statement to the press and an open letter to Representative Bell (Democrat), Illinois, chairman of the investigating committee, yesterday.

In his statement to the press Downey said that Dr. Townsend "flatly denied the assertion of Representative Bell that 'Townsend and his associates knew the evidence to be produced by the committee would be so damaging and devastating that they conspired together for the doctor and his associates to walk out as a means of evading the issue.'"

Downey also denied Bell's charge that the walkout was planned weeks ago.

"The bolt was decided by Dr. Townsend himself after the morning hearing due to the trivialities and unfair and vicious innuendoes and the tactics employed by the counsel for the committee," said Downey.

"The doctor said that he would never submit to any inquisition and when it developed that the hearings were grossly unfair he decided to 'take a walk.' Dr. Townsend actually testified for 2½ days and this was ample time for the committee to have secured all information about the Townsend organization or the personal connection of Dr. Townsend therewith.

In his letter to Bell, Downey asked the privilege of presenting statistical data and economic arguments to the committee. He said that he would not require more than an hour. In addition, he suggested that Representative Frank H. Buck (Democrat), California, be called to reply to his argument.

Downey told the committee that he had announced his candidacy for Congress in California and that he had challenged Buck to a series of debates there. Downey was an unsuccessful candidate for Lieutenant Governor of California last year as the running mate of Upton Sinclair.

In a tone differing from his statement to the press, he wrote:

"May I ask this opportunity to express my appreciation for the many personal courtesies extended to me by members of your committee. While I can not hope you will be returned to Congress except Congressmen Tolan and Collins, I do hope, if you are restored to private life, you will be blessed by good fortune, and that before you have reached the age of 60, an awakened Congress will have provided generous social dividends so that the last years of your life may be crowned by dignity and security."

Some of the members of the investigating committee believe that Townsend should be arrested and brought before the bar of the House for trial. The imminence of adjournment, however, probably will prevent this being done. It is conceded that such a trial might take weeks.

Representative Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, a member of the committee, said he doubted if the proposed debate would be permitted.

Leeds and Bride Cruising in Yacht

New York, May 24 (AP).—William B. Leeds, heir to a tin plate fortune, was on a honeymoon cruise in the West Indies tonight with the former telephone operator he rescued from drowning six years ago.

The son of the late "tin plate king" married Miss Olive Hamilton aboard his yacht, Moana, yesterday. She is the daughter of an unemployed Pittsburgh steel worker.

Word of the ceremony was received today by Leeds' secretary, who said the couple woud cruise in the vicinity of Jamaica until the latter part of next week, when they will return to Miami.

The wireless from the Moana said the couple were "very happily married at sea" by the master of the yacht, Capt. John B. Fox.

Leeds, whose marriage to Princess Xenia, of Russia, ended in a divorce in 1930, pulled the former Miss Hamilton out of the ocean when she fell out of a rowboat near his yacht. At the time she was a telephone operator in Atlantic City.

4,000 U. S.-Italians Given Duce Rings

Chicago, May 24 (AP).—With the iron of empire ringed on fingers which once wore wedding gold, 4,000 daughters of Italy married their husbands anew today in celebration of their homeland conquest of Ethiopia.

In two long lines the couples marched to a common altar to repeat their vows and be blessed for the gold they gave to support Il Duce's armies.

Thousands of Italian-Americans jammed the 132d infantry armory to witness the mammoth re-wedding fetsival. Hundreds more filled the streets outside to hear the ceremony through loud speakers.

Two thousand Italian war veterans—in Fascist uniform—acted as ushers and aided in the task of measuring the fingers of the "brides" for the iron rings Mussolini sent them in return for their original wedding bands.

Complete Data On Negro Race To BeCompiled

Dr. W.E.B. DuBois to Head Group to Trace History and Accomplishments.

A project to compile an "encyclopedia of the Negro," to trace the history of Negro life in America, in Africa and other parts of the world, was announced by an advisory committee here yesterday.

The committee of prominent educators, at their meetings in Washington last week, named Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, sociology professor of Atlanta University, as one of two editors and chairman of the editorial board of the encyclopedia. His colleague is to be selected from the ranks of white scholars interested in the project.

Dr. DuBois, anticipating the publication of an exhaustive work on the Negro race, has already spent two years in preliminary work. He has outlined in some detail subjects to be covered in the volume; he has obtained information on collecting Negro Africana and Americana and has prepared lists of unpublished theses and dissertations.

He took his master's degree at Harvard in 1891, and his doctorate in philosophy at the University of Berlin in 1895. He has written several volumes on the Negro.

Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, of the Washington Cathedral staff, who is president of the Phelps-Stokes fund, will be chairman of the encyclopedia's board of directors. Other officers include Dr. James H. Dillard, former president of the Jeanes and Slater funds, and Maj. Robert Moton, former principal of Tuskegee Institute, vice chairmen, and Benjamin Brawley, professor of English at Howard University, secretary.

Peace Conference Is Urged by Chase

Canon William Sheafe Chase, head of the International Reform Federation, declared yesterday in a speech at Langdon Methodist Episcopal Church he believed Japan and Italy should be compelled to adhere to the Paris Peace Pact.

Canon Chase explained the organization of which he is head thusly:

"We stand for a new alignment of the United States if the World for Peace and International Justice, as Lincoln, Grant and Henry Ward Beecher prophesied. Our President and Congress should now act promptly in support of the American doctrine of the non-recognition of territory acquired by unjustified aggression.

"If churches and other peace-loving organizations," he said, "numbers will promptly petition the President and Congress for such an international conference the request will be granted, I believe the people will elect next November those persons to office whom they consider most likely to protect the people from the ruthless designs of war makers and from grafting politicians."

Recital to Benefit Tomado Victims

Members of the Washington Opera Guild will direct their talents tonight to the relief of Southern tornado victims.

Joseph Levine nephew of the famous pianist, Josef Lhevinne, who is a pianist in his own right, will be the guest artist. Several members will appear in operatic scenes.

Governor Nice Denies Attack On President

San Jose, Costa Rica, May 24 (AP).—Publication of a statment attributed to Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland in Costa Rican newspapers today, which quoted him as attacking the Roosevelt Administration, caused the Governor to express deep regret to American Minister Leo R. Sack.

Gov. Nice, who was spending the week-end in Costa Rica while on a Caribbean cruise, was reported by the press to have said: "A second Roosevelt Administration will bring the United States to ruin and bankruptcy."

Minister Sack immediately wrote the Governor asserting his purported statement was "inexcusable" and in "poor taste." When he received Sack's protest, the Maryland official called at the American Legation and declared he was "outraged" at publication of the statement.

He asserted it was not intended in any way to reflect upon President Roosevelt, whom he said he regarded as a "gentleman of the highest character."

"Publication conveyed a different impression from what I intended," said Gov. Nice.

Minister Sack, in his letter criticizing the Governor, said:

"I appreciate that as a Republican you regard it your duty to attack President Roosevelt at any time and in any place, but as United States Minister to Costa Rica I resent the use of this, a foreign country, as your sounding board.

"It seems that partisanship should cease at the 3-mile limit, and that it is very bad taste for even the most irresponsible American to assail the President of the United States in a foreign country.

"Such an attack is even less excusable and in poorer taste when made by the Governor of the great State of Maryland."

The Sisson Bill Vote.

The House is scheduled to consider the Sisson bill to repeal the "red rider" today. Much has been written and more said about the bill. In essence, it proposes to restore freedom of education to the District of Columbia.

The "red rider" gags the school teachers of Washington. The fact that it was designed as a defense against communism is an altogether secondary consideration. If it had been aimed at cannibalism, it would be the none the less objectionable. The point of criticism is that it represents an attempt on the part of Congress to restrict the field of learning. The National Legislature has extended its authority in a way that the American people have always considered intolerable. For no legislative body is competent to fix the scope of education. And the moment such a course is undertaken real education is at the mercy of propaganda.

The central purpose of education—and on this point hangs the whole theory of democracy—is to train citizens to seek out the truth for themselves. Allow them to inspect only one side of a controversial problem and their study becomes a farce. They do not think, they merely memorize. It was this realization that made Tennessee's "monkey law" so absurd in the eyes of the world a few years ago.

Before the House votes today it should reduce the issue of the Sisson bill to the same simple terms. Are the schools of the Nation's Capital to be permitted to develop thinking citizens or are they to become merely halls where the next generation may gather to recite, parrot-like, the facts and theories prescribed by any given Congress? The vote on the Sisson bill will decide, not alone for Washington but in some measure for the country as a whole, whether education or dictation shall prevail.

Terrorism At Home.

On the heels of a Louisiana verdict finding a sheriff guilty of negligence for failure to prevent a lynching comes news of the conviction in Florida of five policemen involved in the notorious "Tampa floggings." The lamp of social justice burns the brighter for these decisions.

What makes the Florida verdict particularly significant is the fact that the jurors had a complex case to decide. Though from a distance it appeared to be simply a question of whether the police officers had assisted in kidnaping and tar-and-feathering three men, one of whom died as a result, in the Florida courtroom other factors tended to obscure the issue.

To begin with, flogging and "striping" are not uncommon practices in that region. Order, it is explained, must be maintained among the armies of transient laborers attracted by the citrus industry, for these men often become dissatisfied with the small wages allowed them. In Tampa itself, a cigar industry, likewise operating on a low wage scale, invites further labor disturbances which, in the euphemism of a native of the area, "must be discouraged." Moreover, the usual cry of "Communists!" was sent up to distract the jurors. And both local and State politics played conspicuous roles in the trial. Finally, it was no secret that Ku Klux Klan membership cards had been found on some of the men accused of participating in the torture.

The verdict comes opportunely to lend force to the drive against the "Black Legion," a strong-arm agency of the same Ku Klux Klan in Detroit. Several members of this gang have confessed to the murder of a laborer "because he beat his wife." Evidence points to a membership in Michigan alone that runs high into the thousands. Organized to stir up the usual racial and religious hatreds, the society is now strongly suspected of many other hitherto unsolved murders and seeming suicides.

Authorities are amazed at a deluge of statements, from persons too afraid to speak before, indicating that the area had been at the mercy of night-riding fanatics for months if not years. Leaders of the organization, stripped of their hoods, reveal a characteristic low intelligence often verging on dementia. Creatures of the dark, they grovel before the light of publicity now flooding their dens.

Other States might take a tip from Michigan's experience and look about for similar shameful iniquities within their own borders. This reappearance of terrorism, whether in Florida or Michigan, holds an arresting significance for the country as a whole. Violence breeds only on discontent. To clap a few leaders into jail is only a start toward solution of the problem. The larger task of rooting out the causes of discontent is a national obligation that has not yet been discharged.

Organizing Against Crime.

Despite the spectacular recent achievements of the G-men, crime remains, for the most part, an essentially local problem. In the aggregate of lawlessness, numbered public enemies play a relatively small part. It is the routine detection of criminals, administration of justice and rehabilitation of prisoners that tax the ingenuity of organized communities to the utmost.

No single agency can solve these problems, for they are as broad as the community itself and as complex as human relationships. But the co-operation of many officials and organizations out of mutual interest certainly can make notable improvements in existing conditions. From this viewpoint the organization of the Washington Criminal Justice Association may prove to be a truly significant event in the history of law enforcement here.

The association is not a board of critics, it is not a band of vigilantes, nor an unofficial prosecutor of criminals. Its job will be to find out how the law enforcement system of the District is operating, to furnish that information to the public, to cooperate with the police and the courts whenever possible, and to suggest improvements. If this work is well done, its result should be to develop a public consciousness of crime problems, and thus bring to bear upon them more intelligent discussion and treatment.

In this voteless city it is not necessary to emphasize the desirability of concentrating public attention upon a matter which so vitally concerns every citizen. Sensational results should not be anticipated. But from a day to day observation of the machinery of justice in actual operation this body will have a remarkable opportunity for continuous service.

At a meeting of the American Public Welfare Association and the National Probation Association last week the chairman of the Prison Industries Reorganization Administration, Judge Joseph N. Ulman, called attention to the "utter stupidity of what organized society is doing with its criminals." Men who have made mistakes are thrown into prison, schooled in crime and turned loose to prey upon the public. In a general way the public knows that Judge Ulman's indictment of our penal system is accurate, but little specific information is available. By giving the public a clear and faithful picture of what is taking place in our prisons, courts and police departments of the new Criminal Justice Association may strike at the very root of organized lawlessness.

To a large extent, however, the success of the movement will be measured by the support it receives from the public. The organization of this new agency gives the average citizen, as well as its immediate sponsors, the opportunity of active participation in the fight against crime.

A Surprise Attack.

A short time ago the Senate passed the Robinson "Chain Store" bill prohibiting price discriminations and giving the Federal Trade Commission power to set limits upon discounts for large purchases. A companion measure, the so-called Patman bill, differing in several important particulars from the much-amended Robinson bill, had been previously indorsed by the Judiciary Committee. Last Friday the House Rules Committee approved a request for a rule that would give this bill legislative right of way. It will probably be called up for debate tomorrow.

Representatives of six leading agricultural organizations, including the American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Grange, recently asked the Rules Committee to let the measure go over until the next session of Congress "with a view of writing a bill that will correct the abuses complained of without at the same time obstructing the legitimate business operations of farmer co-operative associations." Not only do the farmers fear that the co-operatives would be denied wholesale discounts and otherwise hampered in the conduct of their business, but they think the bill would lead to higher prices, burdensome to farmers and consumers.

While the President has at no time indorsed the price discrimination bills, he has shown no disapproval of Senator Robinson's enthusiastic sponsorship, thereby creating an impression that the Administration is more than friendly toward legislation of this type. In the light of the fears expressed by organized farm groups, it would certainly seem desirable to consider whether measures that tend to raise distributive costs are consistent with the Administration's plans to improve the economic status of the farmer by closing the gap between the prices of goods sold by him and goods bought.

Of course, price discrimination bills cannot be condemned offhand merely because they might increase living costs for particular groups of consumers, or raise prices of specific commodities. A good many serious evils connected with our distributive system call for redress, even though reforms may result in higher prices. However, the admission that abuses exist does not justify imposition of rigid legislative restrictions upon pricing policies for the benefit of one group of middlemen at the expense of others—handicapping not only chain stores but interfering with the established practices of many industries.

Price differentials which can be justified on social and economic grounds in one case may be injurious in others. No hard-and-fast legislative formula, in short, can be counted upon to combat admitted evils without creating new ones. Dr. Melvin T. Copeland, professor of marketing at the Harvard School of Business Administration, maintains that if legislation on price discrimination is enacted it is to the interest of all parties that it should be "simple, clear, and workable." The Robinson and Patman bills are woefully defective in all three respects.

These bills are opposed by a large and influential body of business opinion, to which must be added the opposition of farmers and other consumer groups. And, as pointed out by Gilbert H. Montague, a well-known authority on anti-trust laws, the limitations of personnel and funds of the Federal Trade Commission "allow how uneven and disappointing must be the observance and enforcement of any proposed additions to the Federal Trade Commission act and the anti-trust laws, if these additions go too far beyond the standards of conduct that are already being observed by a substantial majority of all the people affected by these provisions."

The Principle At Stake.

The suit brought by 23 Eastern railroads against the Interstate Commerce Commission, seeking to invalidate its fare reduction order, raises a most important issue. The roads maintain that the order is arbitrary and capricious, and will deprive them of their property without due process of law in violation of the Fifth Amendment.

The ICC may conceivably be right in its surmise that the lower rates will so increase passenger travel as to compensate the roads for the immediate losses resulting from lower fares. Or the dismal forebodings of railway managements may be realized, as seems more likely. The validity of the order, however, does not depend upon the success or failure of a frankly experimental attempt to increase earnings by a drastic reduction in charges, over the protests of the carriers.

The question at issue is whether such compulsion involves an undue and unconstitutional extension of the regulatory powers of the ICC. The roads are anxious to learn how far the commission may go in substituting its judgment for that of private management in matters of policy, and how far it may legally encroach upon the prerogatives, rights and responsibilities of ownership.

A good deal more is at stake, therefore, than immediate financial gains or losses. Indeed, whether this case is won or lost, some of the dissenting roads will probably have to reduce their rates to meet the competition of the assenting B. & O. and affiliated roads. The carriers are fighting, however, to stave off regulatory encroachments that may cost them much more in the future than they are likley to lose by complying with the contested order. For that reason, it is highly desirable that the Supreme Court should be given an opportunity to pass upon the constitutional issues involved on the earliest possible date.

Sight And Foresight.

While some European statesmen were playing with powder and others were struggling to rebuild shattered peace machinery, there was held recently at Paris the eighth annual conference of the International Association for the Prevention of Blindness.

Thirty-eight countries are represented in this league, founded at The Hague in 1929—and these include countries which, as national entities, are reported to be regarding one another along gun-barrels. Physicians from both Italy and Great Britain attended the conference, experts from sanctionist and non-sanctionist lands, specialists from Germany as well as from France. Their purpose is adequately expressed in the title of their association. Their technique is a mutual sharing of each advance in a beneficent knowledge, joint assistance, international co-operation.

The Paris meeting provided only a single example of the contrast between what is daily going on among certain diplomats and what is daily going on among almost all scientists. But this instance is sharpened by the particular mission of the experts on preservation of sight. There are some 6,000,000 cases of blindness in the world; I. A. P. B. want to help present sufferers and reduce the number of cases for the future.

The 6,000,000, however, do not include those statesmen whose defective moral and political vision fails to detect the perils of their present course. If statesmanship could restore and preserve foresight, as science is doing for sight, the world would soon be a better place in which to live.

"How long would you live with a ghost?" asks a spiritualist. Only so long as he could travel as fast as we could.

"Capital and Labor have been pulling together for a number of months," a labor official reports. Yes—and just look how long John Q. Public's legs are!

"The automobile is now in reach of everyone," declares a columnist. And, what's worse, vice versa.

An eminent economist asserts that the ultimate consumer pays for everything. A retail grocer could get a good laugh out of this—if he could keep from crying.

Single Tax And Crime.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The American people have reason to be gratified at the efficiency of the Department of Justice and the capture of so many of the country"s worst criminals. But a good physician, chemist, electrician or engineer is not satisfied until he has gone to the root of any trouble to which his attention is directed and such attention should now be given in a rational way to the cause of and cure for increasing crime.

It will be found that these criminals are very young, in their early twenties. It will also be found that our schools and colleges are turning out thousands of graduates who find the doors of opportunity closed to them. They find no opportunity to earn an honest living. With freedom of choice there will, of course, under the best of social conditions be those who will turn to crime. But it is also true that poverty is the one great cause of crime and that, therefore, it is the part of statesmanship to ascertain the cause and cure of poverty, undeserved poverty.

It is stated that Confucius, the wisest of all philosophers, said that where there is justice there is no poverty. The solution of the problem, then, is to bring about the reign of justice in place of injustice. Unjust Federal taxes and subsidies to favorite classes must cease This will leave but a single tax, that upon ground rent or land values. Prosperity will follow and crime will diminish as a natural result..

In Praise Of Mr. Lewis.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Without being accused of campaigning one may be pardoned for commending as a statesman well worthy of the name Representative David J. Lewis, of Maryland. It is a sad commentary on the intelligence of certain American voters that nonpartisan and patriotic courage of the type constantly displayed by Mr. Lewis throughout his entire political career is not given more adequate recognition.

It is not so much the legislation that Mr. Lewis has sponsored in Congress, although too much cannot be said of such social benefits as the parcel post and other laws which he has advocated, but rather his independence of partisan motives and his selfishness in voting in accord with his conscience and his convictions, rather than in accord with expediency, that commands our admiration.

In viewing the opposition which has arisen to Mr. Lewis in Maryland, granting that opposition is desirable and salutary, one may well ask, What more can a Maryland citizen and an American citizen ask than to be represented by such a man? MARYLANDER.

Cede Us Canada?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every repercussion of the question of European nations' war debt to us reflects more and more plainly their contemptuous attitude toward their solemn obligations and is arousing a growing indignation in this country. War's alarums no longer suffice to placate America as a valid excuse, because their public pronouncements alleging that as a reason are not accompanied by any pledges or promises as to the future.

England was for centuries the pattern and symbol of national honor and stern jealous regard for her credit. "Good as the Bank of England" meant par excellence the world over. A few months ago, back from a London visit, Mr. J. P. Morgan got us green with envy of England's wonderful recovery. He painted a glowing picture of how far she had outstripped us, building boom, prosperous business, disappearing unemployment. He forgot to say whose money was behind it.

It was a good place to say that European nations owed us a sum equal to half our national debt—England five billions, France four billions, Italy two billions, Germany one and a quarter billions and so on to make a total of 13 billions on which they were not even paying the interest.

The Johnson act forbidding and voiding any purchase of bonds or securities of debtor nations gets us nowhere. By reason of the middle man's circumvention it is shorn of either teeth or claws. What to do? How bring them to the cashier's desk in Washington?

How's this? England herself is land-poor. She claims that Canada doesn't pay her way. Let her give us Canada. France could deed us her South American holdings as part payment. Thus we'd have collected half of our debt and still be on the peaceful side of the Atlantic, the sea of troubles, beyond which they can thus conserve their capital and continue their war preparations ad lib.

"We Are Doing Very Well."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that most everyone who is interested in the Washington Symphony Orchestra has spoken his piece I should like to add mine.

It appears to me that all during the controversy there have been many inconsistencies. For instance: Unnumbered paragraphs have been written about the importation of out-of-town musicians to fill the ranks of the orchestra. Yet, the whole controversy revolves around the importation of an out-of-town conductor. I do not know who is back of this move to import an unknown conductor, but I do know it to be funny in the extreme to raise such a rumpus over the importation of the personnel, and say nothing about the importation of the man who is to lead it.

Why not settle these problems in a manner that is amiable, and in private, and permit those who feast on good music to enjoy it without the aftertaste?

Washington missed the performance of a wonderful work which was to have been done by a wonderful artist—Harold Bauer—during the past season simply because of childish friction concerning the importation of another artist.

We have here an orchestra that under the present conductorship will rank second to none in the country in a year or two, and in my humble opinion, the two greatest conductors in America today are Ormandy and Kindler. So let us enjoy ours in peace. We are doing very well, thank you, under the present conductor

Applauds Free Education.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The student of today with free education and free speech is entitled to know the facts of the world. Naturally under these facts governments would come. He must understand other forms of government before he can understand his own. If he taught these forms in school and they are freely discussed he would become more interested in his form of government than he would if they were not discussed in the classroom.

With no knowledge of other governments he would have nothing with which to compare his government and he would take it for granted and show no further interest. It is better for him to discuss them in the classroom than in the alley. Let other forms of government be taught in all public schools so the student might profit by their mistakes. The student of today is the lawmaker of tomorrow.

Tourists' Thanks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May we use the columns of your excellent paper to voice our appreciation of the fine courtesy extended us on the occasion of our recent class trip to your beautiful city?

Everywhere we went we found Government office attaches, traffic policemen, patrolmen and civilians who seemed to have no other duty for the nonce than to assist us in getting the most out of our trip. Explanations and interesting facts by the guides in the several buildings we found most instructive.

Undoubtedly these officials, especially the policemen, come in for their share of censure, so we are happy in the thought that our little meed of praise will offset some of the complaints made by disgruntled tourists. HELEN MESHLEY,

Advice From Aurelius.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Fair-minded Democrats, as well as Republicans, will resent "Jim" Farley's disparaging remarks concerning the State of Kansas and its Governor, Alf Landon.

Landon may lack broad political experience, but he seems blessed with a balance that is conspicuous by its absence in the present Administration.

Marcus Aurelius once said: "I have often regretted my speech, never my silence." Farley should paste that one squarely in the middle of his hat. E. K. G.

"Legislation Versus Constitution."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Today we are confronted with an issue as great probably as any recorded in the annals of our political development. It is one which is deeply woven into the social, economic, and political fabric of our daily life.

To meet it constructively will require all of the patience and inertia endeared to us by our worthy forefathers. We must tackle the problems today which affect our people with the same spirit which enabled them to combat and defeat the powerful intricacies of mercantilism. In 1776 it was a struggle for political justice; today it is the struggle for social and economic justice, but in supplementing the defects of our present set-up we must be aware to the inextricable difficulties which may arise from an unconstructive course.

Today the issue is "Legislation versus Constitution," an issue which in all probability will play a big part in the coming campaign. We have a Constitution, yes, a written Constitution, and one which has served our people well. It has fostered political justice and it still does, but in other respects it has become wholly inadequate to the complex economic arrangement of modern America. Today, more than any time in our history, a liberal interpretation of this document is requisite, but in its present form only the views of the strict constructionists apparently, are warranted.

In England they have a constitution, but it is a constitution of mores and tradition based upon customs handed down from ancient days, royal grants, the Magna Carta, the Habeas Corpus Act, the Bill of Rights, trial by jury and the common law to furnish their guiding principles. The all-powerful British Parliament affords an example of pure representative government and through the organization of their constitution this parliament of the people can legislate to meet their needs, something which is not being done in our own body politic.

Th fundamental principles on which our Government is based should be preserved reverently. The philosophy which Jefferson expounded in the Declaration of Independence and the guarantees incorporated in our own Bill of Rights are requisites to the promulgation of any progressive democratic state. These we should always maintain as long as we profess the belief of "love for God and man," but we should so arrange our governmental system as to afford our people the blessings which our forefathers prayed we would sustain.

Whatever the plans of theorists and the exhortations of the wise, every people comes sooner or later to that kind of government which the facts demand, said James Bryce.

The Post Impressionist

Amusement's Curb-Market.

Post Office, Monday.

A RECENT Post editorial—written, by the way, in a style recalling our own—directed attention to the ultra-fickleness of the jade Fortune whenever she enters the field of the motion-picture.

The Washington instance of "The Dancing Pirate" was cited: a melodious operetta, a triumph for technicolor, a splendid vehicle for the sure-soon-to-be-popular Steffi Duna—but audiences wouldn't give it the support it deserved. It was replaced by a revival of "Show Boat"—"brilliant, with a cast of well-known players, settings which improve upon those of the old 'Show Boat' and most of the songs which turned that vessel into a 'golden galleon,' plus several new ones"—but still a revival: you could hardly get a seat anywhere in the house five minutes after a performance began.

"There is no such thing," said the editorial, "as 'sure fire stuff' in the moovies."

Here's a theme that will bear expansion.

* * *

The novel is a hazard—but the publishers made it so.

Until the early Eighteen-Nineties, the novel, if not a gilt-edge security, was a conservative investment. Now and then, a piece of fiction had spectacular sales, always unforseen by its sponsors and generally not dependent upon its literary qualities: "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was the shining example. But, all things considered, a publisher could safely count his chicks before they were hatched: Dickens would earn a good deal, Thackeray not so much, and so on down the scale, even the small fry paying their way and leaving a bit over.

* * *

Then fashions became more pronounced in fiction, and began to behave as they behave everywhere. They were violent, erratic and brief.

Anthony Hope—who always wanted to write problem novels and did write some charming novels of English country-life—wrote a story about a mythical kingdom and a British commoner loved by its queen. The world went wild over "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Not only did everybody read it: everybody began to write it. George Barr McCutcheon put an American in the lover's role and "cleaned up" with "Graustark." The day of the really big-seller had arrived. Publishers began a crazy competition for the best seller.

* * *

Zenda's vogue stopped over..., leaving many a book-firm high and dry, many an author marooned in the midst of a manuscript. Nevertheless, the competition went on.

Stanley Wayman made a best-seller of "A Gentleman of France." So publishers wanted to publish historical-romances, and writers wanted to write them: Winston Churchill (the U. S. A. Winston), Robert W. Chambers—nearly the entire tribe. And the voracious public devoured even "When Knighthood Was In Flower."

* * *

Oh, yes: this particular gold-rush also stopped as suddenly as it had begun. The Century Company, having tardily joined it and spent fabulous sums on advertising a new historical romance by a new young woman, was only one of many firms really dangerously punished. That year, you could say people stopped reading historical novels at 1:35 p. m. on the second of June.

Very much what happened to the novel happened, at least in America, to the stage. For in America the stage long followed the footsteps of the novel.

E. H. Sothern once told your columnist that he—no, no, Sothern: not the Post-Impressionist!—could always make money by playing Shakespeare, always fill at least the cheaper seats. We wonder if he could do that in 1936. Yet, whether he could or not, our thesis stands in the modern American stage-drama.

Playwrights and producers followed fashions, exhausted their brains and their wallets in gold-rushes. The thing went so far that the play from the best-selling novel was popular—just so long as the particular best-selling novel continued to be a best-seller. More modern fashions of play-construction "came in"—but still fashions and therefore never long fashionable.

And then came the moovies.

You don't have to be told what they did to a stage whose constitution had been thus undermined.

* * *

What now of the moovies themselves?

They have left pie-throwing humor far behind them. They have survived the vampire. They have pretty well emerged from the Wild West. They are "doing the classics," but doing them remarkably well. Sound has been harnessed, color is captured, the third dimension is in the offing. The world is theirs—if they won't permit themselves to be the world's.

They mustn't let the fashions set them. They must set the fashions. That's the only way for an art, an amusement or an industry to tame shrewish Dame Fortune.

The Once Over

Justice Takes a Swim.

("Long Beach, Cal.—When a jury reached a verdict unexpectedly, Superior Court Judge Frank G. Swain, who had gone for a swim in a pool across from the court, had the jurors escorted to the pool to give it to him."—News item.)

Bailiff (in a beach room as the judge enters in a one-piece suit)—Hear ye! Yee! All pesons, etc., etc.

Hizzoner (taking a seat under a parasol)—Call the first witness.

Prosecutor—I must ask the Court's patience for a few moments. The first witness, Elmer Twitchell, is not here yet.

Hizzoner—Where is he?

Prosecutor—He is under a cold shower.

Hizzoner (impatiently)—Dry him out and bring him in

* * * *

Mr. Twitchell (suddenly appearing with a towel wrapped about him)—I'm sorry, yerroner.

Hizzoner—If the Court can wait for his bath, the witnesses should be able to do the same. This is most irregular and hard to overlook. What's your first question, Mr. Prosecutor?

Prosecutor—How's the water?

Counsel—Object.

Hizzoner — Objection sustained. We'll find out for ouselves. Go on.

* * * *

Prosecutor—You recognize the defendant as the man you saw on the afternoon of May 8.

Counsel—Object.

Hizzoner—Oh, it's too hot for all these objections. Go on.

Mr. Twitchell—I am quite sure he is the man, although I would like to see him with his derby hat on.

Hizzoner—The defendant will please put on his hat.

Defendant (standing up in a pair of trunks but with no top)—My hat is in the men's locker room, yerroner.

Hizzoner—Yes, and that's where your jersey must be. I don't mind everybody being cool, but this is no nudist camp.

Counsel—I object to that.

Hizzoner—We all object to that. What's the witness doing with that bottle?

Mr. Twitchell—I was just rubbing myself with sunburn oil, judge.

Hizzoner—Save some for me; I've tried everything, but I burn just the same. Mr. Bailiff, what's that hissing noise?

Bailiff — Several spectators are blowing up their water wings.

* * * *

Hizzoner—If there is any more of that I will clear the court.

(The trial proceeds, and at its conclusion the judge charges the jury while he oils his shoulders, puts in his ear plugs and proceeds to the diving board.)

Hizzoner—The jurors will now retire.

Foreman—Here we go! So deep, fellers!

(The jurors leap into the pool with the judge. The prosecutor and witnesses play handball. The defendant takes a sun bath.)

Hizzoner (as he comes up with the jury)—Has the jury reached a verdict?

Jurors—We have.

Hizzoner—What is it?

Jurors—They oughta change the water in all swimming tanks ottener!

Still Going Strong.

G. O. P. Farm Plank

Middle Western Observer Reports Lowden's Views Are Considered Narrow With Interest Turning To Public Land Withdrawal.

By Hilding Siversen.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Chicago.

WITH THE Republican National Convention so close that you can see the whites of its eyes, there is still a lot of confusion as to the party's farm plank. Harrison Spangler, who heads up the Western division of the national committee, at Chicago, has said that he would like to see Gov. Lowden write the plank. Herbert Hoover has said the same thing.

Lowden's ideas seem to revolve about some sort of a plan resembling the new AAA, except that more of the power would be delegated to the States, with State agencies distributing conservation benefits instead of the Federal Government. There are other phases concerning loans on corn and other crops. Before the enactment of the new AAA, Lowden had advocated Government encouragement to the planting legumes and other soil-conserving crops.

However, there is a large and growing school of thought in Middle Western agricultural circles which inclines toward the idea that this sort of farm relief is too narrow. It is all right as far as it goes, but that it doesn't provide a permanent solution of the vexing problem, since legumes and other soil-conserving crops can be plowed up and put back into corn at a still higher productive capacity, due to Government subsidized fertilization. And the old problem of surplus croplands will still remain, or even increase.

There is a growing realization among the farmers themselves that the national Treasury is rapidly traveling toward its limit of Government benevolences and that, no matter how liberal the politicians are with the people's money, there just won't be enough in the till to keep crop benefits going indefinitely. These farmers also feel that if the Government would only do some other very sensible and obvious things, affairs would soon adjust themselves to the point where no Government benefits would be necessary.

William Allen White and Henry J. Allen, of Kansas; Don Berry, of Iowa, and others have been interested in an idea which would look toward a permanent Government policy of land use and land control.

United States Owns Vast Public Lands.

SUCH A program would take cognizance of the fact that the United States Government has actual or potential control of hundreds of millions of acres of grazing lands, Indian lands, areas subject to reclamation, areas subject to erosion control, areas that could be purchased at a very small sum and retired, areas which are tax-delinquent and which are now being taken over by various States, areas that should be retired from agriculture and planted to forests, areas that have been drained, but which should have remained marshland. At present there is no co-ordinated program along these lines.

The free Government grazing land or that which is leased for a fraction of 1 cent per acre net, after paying administrative costs, constitutes actual, if indirect, competition for the farmer of the humid area. The land under great Federal reclamation projects, formerly desert, constitutes real competition for the farmer in the humid area.

Under the Grand Coulee real estate project, for instance, between one and two million acres will be transformed from desert into intensively farmed land. In fact, all the marginal land, which amounts to at least half a billion acres in the aggregate, constitutes very real competition to the farmer in the humid area, who has paid a high price for his land and is trying to make interest and taxes.

The case of Tom Campbell, the "wheat king," is typical of a cock-eyed land-use policy, or rather the lack of such policy.

According to the magazine Fortune, he managed to get crop rights from the Government on 200,000 acres of Indian lands and other lands of similar type. He paid one-tenth of the crops as rental. Later the rate was changed to 75 cents an acre. His operations mounted into the million-dollar category, and his disastrous experience during the drought years has become a legend.

This semi-arid land should never have been plowed up. It is competition to the family-size farms in the humid areas—farms that cost their owners from $100 to $300 or more per acre. What is the Government doing, anyhow? Is it encouraging farmers or is it encouraging large-scale commercial operations by men who live in the cities? Let's make up our minds, Uncle Sam.

When the AAA came in, Tom Campbell came in for huge benefits. The Government actually paid him, not only for not raising wheat, but for competing with men on family-size farms, to their great disadvantage. The situation is so grotesque, so crazy, that it could hardly be accepted even for another version of "Alice in Wonderland."

Withdrawal Of Public Grazing Lands Proposed.

THERE ARE, according to conservative estimates, something like 14,000,000 head of livestock on public grazing lands, most of which is being used without remuneration to the Government (which means the taxpayers). This constitutes real competition to the farmer on the family-size farm, as well. If these cattle and sheep were shifted to the humid areas they would require more than 20,000,000 acres of pasture, and that, in turn would retire that much cropland, automatically restrict the production of corn, wheat and other staple crops, and raise the price of those crops.

Nobody expects that all this Government grazing land will be retired all at once, but certainly a substantial beginning could be made, especially since the Government allegedly has set out to help the man on the small farm by putting on his heels an army of bureaucrats to tell him just how much he can raise, what kind of crops he can raise and where he can raise them. It just doesn't make sense. There is a vast national hodge-podge instead of an intelligent, farsigthed land-use policy.

If the Republican Party does not tackle this general land-use problem in a statesmanlike way and promise to contract the total crop land area to the area needed for domestic consumption and thus raise farm prices by a broad national program without regimentation, it will be overlooking the biggest bet of the century. However, it might be expecting too much of the old-line politicians, for it is not likely that they have read the voluminous reports of several Federal administrations, and do not realize the vastness and grotesquery of the contradictory hodge-podge that has taken the place of what should be a real land-use policy.

The politician can be expected only to take the line of least resistance, which is to let an already almost bankrupt Treasury pay out direct benefits, permitting large-scale land practices to continue which are almost criminal. The Democrats do not dare to adopt a land-use policy as described, because the party machinery is too deeply imbedded in the localities chiefly involved, and special interests would desperately demand a hands-off policy on grazing, reclamation, etc.

Blum Reported Ready to Ask Rebuilt League

France and Little Entente Back Common Policy on Major Issues.

By the United Press.

Paris, May 24.—The new popular front government fo France, which will take office June 2, will force the issue of reconstruction of the League of Nations at the mid-June meeting of the Council at Geneva, it was reported tonight.

This decision reportedly was reached during conversations between Leon Blum, popular front leader and Premier-designate, and Rumanian Foreign Minister Nicholas Titulescu, speaking on behalf of the little entente.

Blum and Titulescu also agreed that France and the Little Entente will continue to support a common policy on major problems and that France will do its utmost to bring about full discussion of both the Italo-Ethiopian and the Rhineland problems at the next Council session.

France will resume the role of principal protagonist of a strong league and an unbroken front against aggression under the twin theories of indivisible peace and collective security, but she recognizes that the League as it now stands is unable to meet modern requirements.

Three-Point Accord.

Points on which France and the Little Entente have agreed as result of Titulescu's visit are:

1. Both believe that reformation of the League is urgent, but only in the direction of strengthening it, increasing its authority, powers and obligations to all members, and in the coming negotiations France and the Little Entente will oppose any measures tending to weaken the family of nations.

2. Both believe that the League's habit of avoiding knotty problems by postponements and adjournments must end, and that on June 16 the Council must attempt to settle the Italo-Ethiopian and Rhineland problems and reorganize the European system of collective security.

3. The big powers, including Great Britain, must decide on a definite course to follow in the future, announce their intentions openly and then stick to them.

Edouard Daladied, a candidate for the foreign ministry in the Blum government and leader of the Radical Socialists, announced that his party will support any move to reform and strengthen the League.

Daladier said Italy's conquest of Ethiopia damaged the League greatly and that the Covenant should be repaired immediately.

The French stand for a stronger League should check impatience among France's central European allies and halt the tendency toward orientating their policies around Berlin, London or Moscow.

Parade in Paris.

Paris, May 24 (AP).—Socialists and Communists, marching behind red flags, sang the "Internationale" today as they paraded in celebration of the election victory which raised them to power in France.

Leon Blum was pelted with flowers by the admiring paraders as he reviewed them.

The gigantic parade filed past the cemetery wall, where ancestors of the Leftists were slain by Republican firing squads in 1871.

A greater throng than ever massed for the annual commemoration of the last victims of the Commune. Police estimated that more than 150,000 marched under the red flags.

Hoeppels Ask Court To Set Rehearing

Representative John H. Hoeppel, of California, and his son, Charles J. Hoeppel, Saturday asked the District Supreme Court to grant them a rehearing on their appeal from their conviction in the District Supreme Court several months ago on a charge of conspiring to solicit $1,000 for an appointment to West Point.

The Hoeppels claimed, in a brief filed with the United States Court of Appeals yesterday, that the jury which tried them was drawn illegally because one of the jurors held a bonus certificate, another was an employe of the Potomac Electric Power Co., which held Government contracts, a third worked for an office supply company, which did business with the Government, and a fourth was associated with a firm that held accounts for Army officers.

The Hoeppels were sentenced to serve a sentence of from 4 months to a year. They appealed their conviction and last week the appellate court denied their claim that they were convicted illegally. Both have announced their determination to ask the United States Supreme Court to review their conviction, in the event the Court of Appeals rules against them a second time.

Government attorneys made light of the appeal yesterday on the ground the Hoeppels failed to exhaust their jury challenges and therefore were not in position to question that body's legality now.

Pastors to Discuss Spiritual Program

The National Preaching Mission, a movement to vitalize the spiritual life of churches throughout the country, will be discussed by five Washington pastors at the May meeting of the Washington Ministerial Union at 11 o'clock this morning in New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

The ministers, each of whom have taken part in organizing the crusade are Dr. Raphael H. Miller, of National City Christian Church; Dr. Carl C. Ramussen, Luther Place Memorial Church; Dr. W. Angie Smith, Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South, and Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches.

In conjunction with the national program a four-day preaching mission is planned in Washington next November. The Rev. Charles Enders, pastor of Concordia Lutheran Church, who is new president of the Union, will have charge of this morning's meeting.

Starhemberg, In Seclusion, Studies Course

Heimwehr Aids Restless; Schuschnigg Regime Is Turning Catholic.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, May 24.—Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, leader of the Fascist private army, Heimwehr, was alone in a secluded room of the Vienna Heimwehr headquarters today seeking a decision which may vitally affect the fate of Austria.

The results of his solitary contemplation of problems which arose when he was deposed as vice chancellor are still unknown to an apprehensive nation. Starhemberg refused to see even some of his most intimate advisers, including one Heimwehr member of the cabinet.

Outside the room where the chief planned secret strategy, Heimwehr officers were busily strengthening their organizations and asserting belligerently the Heimwehr "will strike" at the proper moment. That moment may be determined at a meeting of leaders, probably on Tuesday.

After he ousted Starhemberg as vice chancellor, Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg announced all private armies, including the Heimwehr, must be dissolved.

Two Killed in Riots.

Two men were killed yesterday in what was officially called a Nazi attack on Starhemberg's Waxemburg Castle, presumably to seize arms. The castle was defended by Heimwehrmen. Seven men were arrested.

This was taken in some quarters as a sign of the growing restlessness of members of the Heimwehr.

Meanwhile Austria, a land in which political parties are abolished by law, saw the ghost of the old Christian Socialist Party arising as Schuschnigg attempted to make his single-handed dictatorship work.

The men he is gathering about him and appointing to positions of trust are drawn largely from the former Christian Socialist Party, of which Schuschnigg was a member in the old democratic days.

Regime Turns Catholic.

The regime is becoming definitely more Catholic and anti-Fascist, policies apparently designed to erase the Starhemberg influence.

Significance was noted in the appointment of Richard Schmitz as burgomaster of Vienna. He is popularly described as "more clerical" than Schuschnigg.

Leaders said a large portion of the Heimwehr is almost as dissatisfied with the present tendency as are the banned Nazis and Marxian Socialists. Schuschnigg is facing the situation resolutely, approving the continued prosecution of Nazis, about 100 of whom were convicted of various charges last week.

Schuschnigg in an address today made another appeal for Heimwehr co-operation and offered his own co-operation to Von Starhemberg.

Heimwehr leaflets distributed in the provinces denouncing Schuschnigg were confiscated by police.

Russia Declines To Reduce Fleet

Moscow, May 24 (AP).—The Soviet Union announced today it cannot consider limitation of its Far Eastern fleet as long as there is no similar agreement binding Japan.

Conversations now going on in London will therefore have to do only with armaments in European waters, it was officially stated.

The announcement was made in the government newspaper Izvestia over the signature of the authoritative spokesman, Karl Radek. He said the Soviet Union has been striving to conclude a separate agreement with Japan, but thus far the efforts have been fruitless.

Throwing the blame on the shoulders of Japan, the statement said the situation was a "direct result of the fact Tokyo broke the Washington agreement atnd abandoned the London Conference."

(Japan walked out of the London Naval Conference early this year when the United States and Great Britain denied her demand for fleet parity. Subsequently Britain, the United States and France signed a "stop-gap" treaty. British-Soviet negotioations are now under way in London with a view to Moscow's adherence to this pact.)

Socialist's Rule Near in Belgium After Elections

Party Holds Big Lead; Vandervelde Expected to Be Premier.

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, May 24.—Socialists were far ahead of other parties in returns late tonight from Belgium's parliamentary elections, and most political observers predicted the nation soon would be directed by a Socialist premier.

It was understood that if the Socialist plurality was maintained in the complete returns, Premier Paul van Zeeland might resign today or Tuesday to make way for a cabinet headed by the Socialist leader Emile Vandervelde, now minister without portfolio, who twice has held the foreign ministry post.

(The apparent success of the Belgian Socialist Party parallels that of the popular front in the recent elections in France, where Leon Blum, long-time Socialist leader, is expected to be named premier early in June.)

Critic of Nazi Regime.

Vandervelde, who was invited to assume the Belgian premiership in 1925 but was unable to organize a ministry, was foreign minister in the cabinet formed at that time by Prosper Poullet, and also held that position in the succeeding government of Henri Jaspar. He was an advocte of Germany's rejoining the League of Nations, in which he has played an important role, but has criticized the Nazi government of Germany.

Catholic Party lost heavily in the election, late returns indicated, and in political circles there was speculation as to whether it would continue to participate in the government or would join the opposition if it did not make a good showing.

Disorders Only Minor.

The elections passed off with only minor disorders.

The Rexists, a militant, dissident Catholic organization, apparently made important gains, chiefly at the expense of the Catholics. The Rexists are a new element in the erstwhile three-cornered contest between the Catholic, Liberal and Socialist parties.

Communists, as well as Rexists, registered some gains from Socialists in the early returns, which showed that Liberals were maintaining their position.

British Soldier Killed as Arabs Attack Prison

Reinforcements Balk Jail Delivery at Tulkarem; Nazi Ship Bombed.

Jerusalem, May 24 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—One British soldier was reported killed today when an Arab mob attempted a daring delivery of prisoners serving terms at hard labor in a prison near Tulkarem.

(Nearly 40 persons, most of them Jews, have been killed since an Arab general strike began April 19 in protest against Jewish immigration and sale of land to Jews.)

Reinforcements sent to the prison from Hedera routed the attackers, who retired to the hills maintaining their fire. The convicts recently rebelled in sympathy with the anti-Jewish general strike.

Terrorists also attempted to bomb the German steamer, Richard Borchard, flying the Nazi swastika, when it entered the temporary harbor at the all-Jewish city of Tel-Avic to unload, passing up the neighboring Arab port of Java. Two bombs were thrown at the ship from lighters.

Eight bombs were thrown in the vicinity of Tel-Aviv. A demonstration in Jaffa was dispersed by police fire.

Cardozo Marks 66th Birthday; Host to Friends

Supreme Court Justice, Named by Hoover in '32, Does Usual Work.

By the Associated Press.

Benjamin Nathan Cardozo—the little man with a large head and shock of unruly white hair who sits at the far end of the long Supreme Court bench—was 66 years old yesterday.

"Yes, he knows it's his birthday," a member of his bachelor household said, "but he plans the usual routine at work. A couple of intimate friends are to be guests at lunch."

Appointed by President Hoover in 1932 after a brilliant record as a jurist in New York State courts, Cardozo is the newest justice, but not the youngest. Justice Stone, now 63, was named to the high court in 1925 by Coolidge and Justice Roberts, recently 61, by Hoover in 1930.

As Cardozo reached 66 the total ages of all court members jumped to 638, an average a shade under 71 years. Except for Cardozo, Roberts and Stone, the six other members of the court are eligible to retire on full pay of $20,000 a year.

They range from Justice Butler, 70, to Justice Brandeis, 79. Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Sutherland and McReynolds are 74 and Justice Van Devanter, who has served more than 25 years on the highest court, has passed 77.

Cardozo, a Democrat, has followed the liberal views of the man he succeeded, the late Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Almost always Cardozo, Brandeis and Stone vote together on important constitutional questions. They have been friendly to some of the New Deal measures which a majority of the court invalidated.

Frail in physique and health, Justice Cardozo avoided formal society in his first years here, but he has been seen in public more frequently this year.

When he learned only a minority of the justices planned to attend a White House function in his honor, Cardozo altered his announced plans and attended.

That night Alice Roosevelt Longworth was seen in animated conversation with the shy, small justice who usually has a merry twinkle in his eyes.

"He's an old dear," news writers later recorded Mrs. Longworth as saying.

Cardozo who was born in New York City, has written a score of the majority opinions for the court this term and dissented vigorously in a dozen others.

His facile pen has made his opinions sparkle with tart phrases. They leave no doubts—even for laymen—as to what they decide.

Greatest Poet

By William Lyon Phelps.

A. E. Housman.

The death of Alfred E. Housman, at Cambridge, England, on the first day of May, removed the greatest of poets since the death of Kipling.

The work of poets is measured not by quantity but by excellence; and, although anyone may read through the complete poetical works of Housman in two hours, it will take more than a lifetime to forget them.

* * * *

Prof. Housman was born March 26, 1859, and was therefore 77 years old at the time of his death.

He was an Oxford graduate, was professor of Latin at the University of London from 1892 until 1911, and professor of Latin at the University of Cambridge from 1911 to his death. He was an honorary Fellow of St. John's College, Oxford, and of Trinity College, Cambridge. He was never married and, like the poet of the eighteenth century, Thomas Gray, he lived in a dormitory at Cambridge University. Like Gray, also, he published very little, did everything he could to avoid publicity of any kind and devoted his life to scholarship.

It is amazing that a man who spent nearly all his time on minute variations in Latin texts should have been able to produce a clear, unwrinkled, limped stream of lyrical poetry; but it is even more remarkable, that possessing this ability, he produced only two thin volumes of verse, "A Shropshire Lad" in 1896 and "Last Poems" in 1922. He also published only one lecture, "The Name and Nature of Poetry," delivered at Cambridge, May 9, 1933. An earlier lecture, delivered at University College, London, October 3, 1892, was never published, but he finally allowed 100 copies to be printed at Cambridge in 1933 of which none were for sale. He was kind enough to give me an autograph copy, which is worth its weight about 100 times over in gold, and which contains wisdom more precious than rubies.

He defends the study of Greek and Latin because the acquisition of these languages and their literature gives pleasure. He quotes Aristotle, who said, "All men possess by nature a craving for knowledge." This, said Housman, is a natural passion, "no less universal in diffusion through mankind than the craving for food and drink."

There is a wholesome bitter taste in Housman's poetry that will act as a preservative for the next half-dozen centuries. The patriotism of soldiers is easily praised, but who will say a word for the mercenaries? This lonely scholar said the first and last word in their behalf.

EPITAPH ON AN ARMY OF MERCENARIES.

These, in the day when heaven was falling,
The hour when earth's foundations fled,
Followed their mercenary calling
And took their wages and are dead.
Their shoulders held the sky suspended;
They stood, and earth's foundations stay;
What God abandoned, these defended,
And saved the sum of things for pay.

Lord Fairfax CountryClub Has Opening

Large Group of Guests Inspects Old Mansion at Alexandria.

President Graham Host; Golf Course to Be Built Soon.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Days when Lord Fairfax was host at the white mansion on the crest of Mount Eagle were revived in the spirit of the present era at the formal opening of Lord Fairfax Country Club yesterday on the historic old estate. Mr. William Allston Graham, president of the club, received with Mrs. Graham, the Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. R. Walton Moore, his sisters, the Misses Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Latane, of Alexandria; Col. and Mrs. J. Miller Kenyon, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Rixey Smith and Col. Barry Buckley.

An atmosphere of hostility native to old houses where generations of young people and their elders have welcomed friends, pervaded the clubhouse. The Colonial furniture looked as though it had been there always and the guests seemed as much at home as though the party were one of many they had attended there. They gathered in groups on the lawn, on the upper and lower verandas, sat about the rooms downstairs or danced to the music of the orchestra which played on the sun porch, off the drawing room.

Baskets and bouquets of flowers decorated all the rooms. A centerpiece of American beauty roses was used on the table in the dining room, where the color of the flowers was repeated in the raspberry ice which was served. Assisting at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. Rixey Smith, Mrs. Blaine Lipscomb, Mrs. Kenyon, Miss Lucrezia Clark and Miss Helen Bailey. Mrs. Alexander G. Bentley assisted at the table where punch was served on the lawn.

Meet After Many Years.

One of the interesting coincidences of the afternoon was the meeting of Mrs. Lipscomb and Col. Buckley, both native Washingtonians, but who had not seen each other since Col. Buckley served as an usher at the wedding of Mrs. Lipscomb's sister, Margaret Blaine and Dr. H. J. Crosson, nearly 35 years ago.

Mrs. Lipscomb yesterday wore a costume combining shades of violet and lavender, with a bunch of purple and yellow pansies trimming the front of her violet hat.

Mrs. Graham wore a blue and white print with a white hat.

Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner was among the guests and drew a group of friends about her on the lawn where she was obliged to sit rather quietly as she is just recovering from an injury to a foot which kept her at home for some weeks. The chairs on the lawn were placed so as to command a view of the Potomac River and the lowlands in the distance.

Senator and Mrs. Robert J. Bulkley were there, as were Mr. and Mrs. Donald Douglas, of Alexandria; Mr. and Mrs. James Haley, Mrs. Lee Phillips, Mrs. John Allen Daugherty, Mrs. John E. Fowler, Miss Marjorie Jane Dampman, Mrs. Charles Hume, Mr. Jack Hayes, Mrs. Robert E. Lee 3d, Mrs. Robert F. McKenzie, Mr. Floyd Wagaman, Mr. Ralph Snowden Hill, Mr. Harold Long, president of the Arts Club; Mr. Mason Terry, Mrs. Charles F. Cramer, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carneal, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Wells, Mrs. Louis R. Lemke, Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner Booth, Mr. and Mrs. Aldrich Dudley, Mr. and Mrs. W. Seldon Washington and Mr. Fred Huat.

Mrs. Scott Williams was among the guests, accompanied by her daughter, Joan, and her young son, Richard, who are leaving on June 10 for a holiday in England.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Peck, who have recently returned from New York and Atlantic City, were also there.

Fairfax Descendant Present.

Mr. Milton S. Fairfax, jr., of Alexandria, was the only member of the Fairfax family present at the reception. The two sisters of Lord Fairfax, of London, who were to have been honored guests, were unable to attend. Mr. Fairfax is a descendant of the sixth Lord Thomas Fairfax. His aunt, Mrs. C. R. Davis, has written a history of the family, which includes many stories about the historic house now the home of the Lord Fairfax Country Club.

One could not but be impressed yesterday by the revival of festivity in the old house. It lent itself so naturally to the gathering of friendly people, many of whom figure in the history of the present era as did those who frequented it in the days when Lord Fairfax presided over the household. Only a change in the costumes of the guests would have been necessary to transform the picture into one of 200 years ago. The house is so secluded from the highway and remote from the activity of the city below, it endows its surroundings with its atmosphere of dignity and antiquity.

The hours of the reception were from 5 to 8 o'clock but many of the guests came earlier in order to look over the grounds which are soon to be laid out in a golf course with natural hazards. The young people of whom there was a large number present, remained later to dance. Some who came as guests, went away as active members, applying for membership after having seen the beauty of the club.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Stone Are Parents of Daughter

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Stone, of Boone Hall Plantation, Mount Pleasant, S. C., have announced the birth of a daughter. The child will be named Ellen Alexander Stone in memory of Mr. Stone's first wife, Ellen Ewing Stone, who was a sister of the present Mrs. Stone. Mrs. Stone was Miss Alexandria Ewing, daughter of the late Commissioner of Patents and Mrs. Thomas Ewing, before her marriage to Mr. Newbold Noyes some years ago.

Mr. Stone was formerly attached to the Canadian Legation in Washington.

Historic Homes In Queen Anne Visited by 400

Ten Noted Places, Gardens Seen in First Tour Held in County.

Much interesting history in Queen Annes County in Maryland has been recalled by the garden tour held Saturday, the first occasion on which the old places shown have been opened to the public. The fine weather brought over 400 visitors to the tour, proceeds of which will go to St. Barnabas Church, which was opened yesterday for the event.

The ten homes and gardens shown yesterday are among the oldest in Maryland, some of them dating back more than 200 years. One of the most historic is that of Mr. and Mrs. W. Beall Bowie. The two children of Mr. and Mrs. Bowie will be the eighth generation of their family to live there. George Washington and many other personages were entertained there, and the house is noted for its great curving stairway and hand-carved mantels, as well as for the rose walks in the garden outside.

Riversdale, the home of Mr. A. W. Lasserty, which was opened on Saturday, was built in 1802 by a Belgian nobleman, Baron von Stier, as a gift to his daughter, who was married to a member of the famous Calvert family, of Maryland. Another house of historic interest was Fairview, built by the father of Gov. Oden Bowie and occupied by the Governor's youngest son, Mr. W. Booth Bowie, and Mrs. Bowie.

Other homes opened on Saturday were Beall's Pleasure, home of Mr. and Mrs. Brice Clagett, who entertained at a garden party there yesterday afternoon; Compton Bassett, the home of Dr. and Mrs. Reverdy Sasscer, the land for which was granted in 1697; Dower House, owned by Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, originally the old Calvert Hunting Lodge; Poplar Hill, occupied by Mrs. Chandler Hale; Graeden, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles N. Berry; Bowiebille, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Knapp, of New York, and Mullikinn's Delight, the home of Capt. and Mrs. Charles Kirtley.

Miss Harriet Bishop and Mr. Albert Adams, the latter of New York City, are visiting the former's mother and father, Dr. and Mrs. F. C. Bishop, Sligo Park Hills, Md.

Visitor at Legation

Underwood & Underwood.

MISS LOLITA BATTLE,

niece of Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Minister of the Dominican Republic, who is visiting her aunt and uncle at the Legation. She has recently returned from a European tour, and after a stay of three weeks in the Capital will leave for her home in New York.

THE WASHINGTON SCENE

By the Poe Sisters.

The roses are blossoming at Dumbarton Oaks—roses of today and roses of yesterday that may have been planted in the days when John C. Calhoun and his family lived at the historic mansion. The magnolias, lilacs and other flowering trees also are in full glory and Washington garden lovers will have an opportunity to view them on Thursday from 2 to 7 p. m., when the gardens will be open to the public for the benefit of the Washington Home for the Incurables.

Speaking of gardens, one is reminded of another garden—a hidden garden, as it were—on the grounds of the home of Mrs. Hugh Campbell Wallace, president of the Home for the Incurables, on Massachusetts avenue. As she works at her many tasks for the home, Mrs. Wallace can look on her lovely formal garden from her library window. She had her garden made on the site of a small, red brick house she owned next to her home. The picturesque wall which insures seclusion for her garden was built of the brick from the little house and she has painted its wall a dark red, and there is also a wall fountain.

To return to the opening of Dumbarton Oaks Gardens on Thursday, Miss Elizabeth Holting, daughter of Mrs. G. Freeland Peter, in charge of the committee of young women looking after the arrangements for the opening, is, of course, in constant consultation with Mrs. Wallace and the other members of the board.

The Washington Home for Incurables is another philanthropic venture here which owes its inspiration to the family of William W. Corcoran, the donor of the Corcoran Gallery of Art. His niece-in-law, Mrs. Charles Hill, obtained the support of the rector of St. John's Church, Lafayette square, who gave is name and the first $10 toward the establishment ot a home. During the past decade, Mrs. Archibald Hopkins was president of the home and gave untiring service to it. After Mrs. Hopkins' death several years ago, Mrs. Wallace became president.

Among those on the board of managers are Miss Bessie J. Kibbey, Mrs. Ridgley Hunt, Mrs. Charles H. Woodhull, Mrs. Anne Archbold, Mrs. John C. Boyd, Mrs. Arthur M. Chichester, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., Mrs. Albert H. Lucas, Mrs. Gilham Morrow, Miss Elizabeth Nolting, Miss Elizabeth P. Patterson, Mrs. George Angus Garrett, Mrs. J. Harry Covington, Mrs. Charles S. Aiden, Mrs. Robert S. Chew, Mrs. E. R. Einkenstadt, Mrs. Sherman Flint, Mrs. Carroll Greenough, Mrs. Hennen Jennings, Miss Elizabeth Keyser, Mrs. George R. Lockwood, Mrs. C. Carroll Morgan, Mrs. Edgar Snow, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Robert W. Bliss, Mrs. James M. Helm, Mrs. Brewster Marwick, Mrs. P. M. Rhinelander, Mrs. C. A. Richmond, Mrs. Eugene Roberts, Miss Isabel Sedgley, Mrs. James Spear Taylor, Mme. F. Vurpillot, Mrs. Horace Lee Washington, Mrs. Henry W. Watson and Miss Rosalind Wright.

Many Washingtonians interested in social welfare are in Atlantic City this week attending the Conference for Social Work. When it met here some years ago, one of the most energetic persons there was Mrs. Henry Ford, wife of the automobile king. To a reporter who discovered her in a small church, listening to a report on recreation, she made the request not to have her name appear in the publicity, but she was helpful in giving data for the story.

Genealogical Group Conducts Exhibition

National Society Displays Charts; Dinner Held.

The National Genealogical Society, under the direction of Mrs. Andrew J. Sanford, held its annual exhibit at the Y. W. C. A. last week, which was attended by many members and friends of the society.

The display of anchestral charts and pedigrees, coats of arms and family genealogies, published and in manuscript, was arranged by by Mrs. Eugene L. Culver. A dinner preceded the showing.

The retiring president, Maj. Hallock P. Long; the incoming president, Prof. Frederick C. Torrey; the past president, Dr. Addams Stratton McAllister, and Dr. Gauis M. Brumbaugh, editor of the National Genealogical Society's quarterly, gave talks on the society's work. Miss Cora C. Curry, librarian, stressed the organization's need for a headquarters of its own and Mrs. G. U. Wickware presented a parody on the proceedings of a meeting of the official board.

Most curiously examined of all the display were charts depicting some dozen or more lines of descent from Adam and Eve to the present time. Biblical genealogies were followed in each case, coming down through the sons of Noah until after the Kings of Judah, when they were joined with the earlier Kings of Ireland, and brought down through royal pedigrees of Europe

For Love or Money

By ROB EDEN

Brenda Fayre, 22, has become involved in a world of lies because of her loyalty to her invalid sister, Lally, who cannot walk. Brenda, broke and at her wits' end, has accepted a job of which she is ashamed—"siren" for Walter Jason, salesman of worthless gold mine stock. Her job is to entertain Jason's prospective victims.

Brenda has been more easily able to deceive Lally about her work because Lally has fallen in love with Val Sargent, brilliant young writer who lives in the apartment above theirs. Brenda has guessed her sister's secret love and knows it is because of Val that Lally is determined on an operation which may enable her to walk. And Brenda knows, too, that Val does not love her sister, but herself. To her, her own feelings in the matter are of no moment. She is solely concerned in protecting Lally and avoids Val. Jason also is in love with Brenda though she scarcely realizes it. The person who does realize it is Ethel Rush, Jason's woman partner, who loves him.

Carl Orth, who has been identified as a sugar planter, and who has a long scar on his cheek, appears about to buy some stock from Jason. Brenda has reported to Jason that she fears the man.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN.

VAL HAD THREE books on Guam in front of him, one of them opened to a map, and below the map was some scratch paper and a pencil that needed sharpening badly. He wasn't looking at the map, however, nor at the books. He was staring fixedly across the table of the reading room in the public library at a summer school college girl who was reading up for a bacteriology examination. She also had several books in front of her, and a note book, but for the past half hour she had not made much progress. From time to time, she glanced across the table frowning. Finally, when she couldn't stand it any longer, she said sharply: "I won't have you stare so rudely at me!"

Val didn't hear and he continued to stare.

"I tell you I won't have you staring at me, do you hear?"

"Hear what?" He came to himself with a start.

"I won't let you stare at me like that!"

"I staring at you? You're quite mistaken, ma'am. I wasn't staring."

The girl picked up her books and her notes and flounced off to another table. Val continued to stare, past her chair which was empty, to the white head of a man directly beyond the chair. He didn't know he was staring. He hadn't realized he had annoyed the girl, nor that he was looking now at a shock of white stiff hair and the back of a soiled white collar. He was dreaming, that was all. And pleasantly dreaming, too, about Brenda.

At home is was practically impossible to dream about her, because Mazie insisted on breaking into his dreams all the time, goading him to work. But here, in the quiet reading room, with the books on Guam in front of him, which he had never intended to look at when he drew them from the shelves, Maizie didn't bother him, and he could think about Brenda uninterruptedly. He could think about her all day if he wanted to. He liked to think about her. He liked to close his eyes and see her before him, with her halo of copper brown hair and her grave sweet eyes, and her mouth sliding every now and then into a smile.

Brenda, Brenda. So nice saying her name to himself, repeating it over and over and over. Sometimes he said it sharply, as if he were scolding her, sometimes he said it tenderly, softly. Brenda! Brenda. Brenda. Brenda! Brenda, darling . . . Brenda, dear . . .

"Please, would you be quiet? Stop muttering. I'm trying to work." A serious looking middle-aged man next to him touched him on the arm, and Val realized that he must have pronounced the name aloud instead of silently as he thought he was doing.

He closed up the books in confusion, gathered up his pencil and paper and got up. Apparently the public library was no place for dreaming, either, when he was apt to lose himself in his dreams.

From the library he started walking, aimlessly, not looking where he was going, not caring.

"How long have I been in love with her, Maizie?" he found himself saying, but whether it was to himself or aloud he didn't know, and he didn't care. "How long has it been? From the first, do you think, and I didn't know it? And the love was growing all the time, blooming like Lally's morning glories? Or just recently?"

"Were you talking to me, young man?" A thin, waspish spinster was looking into his eyes. She and Val were alone on a traffic island.

"No, madam. Indeed not. I'm memorizing a speech, that's all——"

He got away from the island as fast as he could.

"You see, Maizie. I'm quite mad," he said when he was on the other curb. "As mad as Paul is about you. Amazing how much fun it is to be mad! I've never been this mad before. It's lucky you're nearly finished, or we'd both be in a bad way."

The dark clouds brought a heavy shower, but Val didn't notice the rain. It passed quickly and the sun came out. The pleasant thoughts continued, the pleasant dreams. Now Brenda was beside him, walking with him, and he was talking to her; now Maizie was beside him, and he was telling Maizie about Brenda.

At 4 o'clock he looked up surprised. He was in front of the Corwin flats, right at the main entrance.

"Well!" he exclaimed.

"Well, what, Sargent?" A man moved along beside him.

Val turned quickly. The voice was familiar although he had not heard it for a long time. He saw a man who was several inches taller than he was.

The man had hair peppered with gray, and a broad scar that ran on his right cheek almost from his eye to his jowl. His quiet gray eyes were smiling gravely, and his hand was held out to him.

"Brady!" Val cried. "Tim Brady! How long has it been shince I've seen you?"

"April 20, 1929. You were on the World then. We had dinner at the Lafayette——"

"And you told me I'd make a good Government detective, if I'd put my mind to it."

The man's quiet eyes twinkled. "I believe I did. And I still believe it. What are you doing now?"

"Writing a novel."

"A good novel?"

"I hope so. And you?"

"Browsing, that's all."

"Good pastures?"

Brady shrugged his shoulders in the old way. "Very good, I'd say."

"Not at the Corwin?"

"Val, I've an aunt living here, whom I'm seeing this afternoon."

"You don't say!" This, also, was an old answer of Brady's—one that was familiar to Val. "Really, Brady, I haven't kidnaped anybody, and I'm not stealing any money and I'm not a fugitive from justice. That lets me out, I guess. Like to come up and chin awhile?"

"Haven't time today. Maybe some other day. What's your apartment number, by the way?"

"Six nineteen."

"Know anybody in the joint?"

"A couple of girls in the apartment below, and the landlady—that's all."

"Mind telling me the name of the landlady, so I won't swim in there unprepared?"

"Sure enough. Her name is Mrs. Moffit."

"Either of the girls by any chance tall, say about five nine, with black hair? Might be dyed, though, come to think of it."

Val shook his head. "You jolly well know it would be dyed. No, I only know two girls, and they're not likely to be connected with any trouble. Sisters. One of them can't walk, and the other——"

"The other?" Brady prodded him.

"The other, Tim Brady, is the sweetest girl in the world!"

"Got it bad, haven't you?"

"Very bad. The real thing this time."

"Got a picture of her around you?"

Val did have a picture, which he pulled out proudly from his wallet. It was one he had taken himself of Brenda and Lally in the park one Sunday. Lally in her chair, and Brenda beside it smiling.

"Not so bad," Brady remarked after he had looked at it.

"You know nothing about love, Tim, therefore you should make no comment. I'm going to marry the girl, if she'll have me, and if—my novel sells."

"Does she know it?"

"Not yet, but she will soon—as soon as the novel is finished and accepted."

"Luck!"

"Luck yourself!" They parted at the entrance, Val for the lobby, and Brady for a taxi which was waiting down the street for him.

Waiting on Baby May Prevent His Trying to Walk

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

Sam was very slow in learning to get about. Though well on in his second year, he would neither creep nor walk. His parents were worried and called in a physician to examine the child and advise them. But the physician found nothing wrong in the child, and had no advice to give but "Patience."

A child should not be forced to walk. Up to eight or ten months old, he is better for not trying to stand up. If, after a year, however, he is still lacking in the enterprise which makes him want to "go places" a little mental stimulation will not be amiss.

The trouble with Sam was that he saw no need of getting about. What he wanted he could get without moving. He was surrounded by toys; nurse or mother was always at hand to do his bidding; meals were prompt and satisfying, and the nursery offered no attractions greater than those spread immediately before him. There was no incentive for him to make any effort.

If, instead of waiting on him hand and foot, his mother had deliberately put some of Sam's toys out of his reach, and had then gone away, leaving him to solve the problem of reaching them, Sam probably would have worked out some means of locomotion. Too easy a life makes anyone lazy—even a baby—and Sam was lazy.

Charm Links Complete New 'Bicycle Togs'

Copies of Early American Tokens Give Authentic Touch to Ensemble.

By Ethel Ehlen.

Following the trend for "bicycle clothes," the Early American charm bracelet has appeared to add an amusing touch to the summer ensemble. The basis is a gold-plated or sterling link bracelet, to which charms, authentic copies of old American pieces, are added as desired. Such things as ancient steam engines, automobiles, bicycles, fireman's hats, tools, animals, street cars, hearts, musical instruments and lanters, are attached to the links to "charm" the wearer.

The "Van Gogh" is lovely to accompany sheer summer costumes—made of prystal in such luscious tones as lime, grapefruit, hydrangea blue, raspberry sherbet, wistaria and ice blue. Bracelets, necklaces, pins, clips and earrings are available in this effective transparent medium. In separate pieces or matched sets, it could be chosen as the only color note for a white frock, or form an interesting contrast for any of the smart summer tints; equally appropriate for evening or daytime wear.

To add an individual touch to the spectator sports costume, there are a number of clever new versions in wooden bead jewelry. Aloha, inspired by the Hawaiian lei, is the wooden bead, match-shaped with brilliant-colored bead ends, fashioned into dangling clips, "lei" bracelets and necklaces. As colorful and perky as it is novel and just the thing to add a bit of dash and individuality to an otherwise simple frock.

Bachelor buttons, of round wooden beads in gay colors, lend themselves beautifully to wide bracelets, clips and an unusual necklace with ends of bright cord which is versatile enough to serve as a belt or headdress, at the wearer's discretion.

Massive-looking pieces designed to look like bamboo is a third wooden bead interpretation. Some of this is adroitly combined with silk cord, using the bamboo effect as a medallion decoration.

So "she shall have music wherever she goes," there is the Schiaparelli bell-bracelet; wide links of gold or silvered metal with six tinkling bells. For the girl who has deserted bridge for monopoly, there is an amusing bracelet by that name, narrow metal links with the various pieces used in the game (houses, dice, etc.) as the medium of decoration. In keeping with the present "dangling theme" are the geometrically shaped metal pins with tiny initials dangling from very narrow chains. Metal medallion pins with flowers or ladybugs, also of the metal and in gay colors, are new and smart as an accessory to the summer cotton frock or suit.

Teachers Advised To Dance, Smoke And Be Human

Pittsfield, Mass. (AP).—Grover C. Bowman, superintendent of North Adams schools, has advised school teachers to "dance, smoke, dress in style and live like other people."

"Our American teachers are a nervous lot," he told the Parent-Teacher Association and Berkshire County educators. "Suppressions and frustrations of our teachers are bound to be reflected in the children they teach, making a nervous, less receptive class."

Second Marriages Often Childless

The number of childless marriages is at least twice as high among divorces as it is among successful monogamists, according to a study by Paul Popenoe, director of the Institute of Family Relations in Los Angeles, in the current issue of the Journal of Heredity.

Summing up studies regarding divorce, Dr. Popenoe states: "For the present one may conclude that somewhere between one-third and one-half of the divorcees remarry, that those who do remarry are more likely to be men than women, and that the male divorce is more likely to marry a younger woman not previously married than a divorced woman."

The GENTLER SEX . . .

By Malvina Lindsay.

The Party Platform.

President—Ladies, we have met to decide on what planks we want in the party platforms. You know how nice the Republicans and Democrats have always been to us——

Mrs. Wright—Madam President, may I interrupt to say that we ought to come out for a good moral issue. As women, as mothers——

Mrs. Gink—I move that something be done about the loud clothes men are wearing. It's simply disgraceful. They all look like race track characters. It seems as if all men want to do nowadays is to attract attention from women.

Mrs. Dizzie—Well, the women are to blame. If they would just ignore the men . . . not stare at them so much . . . really I was embarrassed yesterday for a young man on a bus——

Mrs. Flint—I rise to a point of order.

President—Ladies, please talk to the question.

Mrs. Nutter—I think we ought to do something about foreign affairs.

Mrs. Wright—I move we ask for a resolution about King Carol——

Dr. Nannie B. Hopper—It would be no use. Men always stick together.

Mrs. Close—I say the United States ought to stay home and mind its own business. We've got enough abuses here.

Mrs. Gink—I second the motion. I think we ought to do something about the propogandists.

Mrs. Wright—Just a minute. We ought to make it clear that we are not opposing the RIGHT kind of propagandists.

Miss Tootle—I say we ought to ask the parties to take a definite stand against the increase of quadruplets——

Dr. Hopper—It would be no use. Men always——

Mrs. McAddle—Don't you think that as women—as mothers—we ought to do something constructive? It just occurs to me we should submit a plank asking for the air conditioning of pet shoppes. I saw a poor little lizard the other day——

Mrs. Smiley—May I suggest that we ought to be very tactful in the way we present our resolutions. You know how men are.

Miss Tootle—Madam President, I have a perfectly wonderful idea! Why couldn't we present our planks to the convention in a skit? You know . . . dress as elephants and donkeys——

Mrs. Smiley—I think we ought to have prettier costumes. You know how politicians are——

Mrs. Gink—I have it! We could give a pageant!

Mrs. McAddle—And dress as goddesses of liberty.

Mrs. Nutter—Don't you think we ought to wear something more modern . . . like swim suits——

Dr. Hopper—It would be no use——

Mrs. Flint—I move we adjourn.

Mrs. Smiley—I call for a vote first.

Mrs. Pry—May I inquire what we are voting for?

President—Will someone make a motion?

Mrs. Nutter—I move that we ask both parties—in a nice way of course—to nominate a woman for President.

Mrs. McAddle—Ladies, I think we should begin in a smaller way. You know how men are. I know how Mr. McAddle is. Why not ask them this time to nominate a woman for Vice President?

Dr. Hopper—I tell you it would be no use——

Miss Tootle—Madam President, I have a perfectly wonderful idea! One that will please everybody! I move that we ask each of the parties to nominate a woman for Second Vice President!

Mrs. McAddle—In charge of gavels!

Chorus—Fine!

Mrs. Dizzie, Wright, Pry, etc.—Second the motion.

President—All in favor say 'Aye.'

Chorus—Aye.

President—The vote is unanimous.

Foreign Posts Denied Women

Britain Refuses to Grant Equality to Sex in Diplomatic Corps.

BRITISH WOMEN have suffrage and a place in public life, but they still have some wide rivers to cross before they can consider themselves on equal ground with men.

Proof of this was evidenced recently in the government's admission that no woman could be employed in the diplomatic corps. This was made public soon after an erroneous report was sent out to the effect British women were to enter diplomatic ranks.

Reasons for the stand against women in this field were given in a recent White Paper report, which reads in part:

"In the very large majority of consular posts, officers have to deal with a number of matters which it would be difficult for the average woman to handle, and although it may be that women can and do participate in this country in work of a kind analogous to that of consular offices, it would be wrong to compare conditions in many foreign countries to those prevailing at home. When disturbances occur which are thought to menace the lives or property of British subjects, the normal course is to evacuate women and children and, so far as possible, to retain men at their posts.

"It is not possible to contemplate a situation in which a woman consul should be so retained while the rest of her sex are sent to a place of security.

"To throw the service open to women without any restriction appears to the government to be, at present at any rate, undesirable.

"It is to be remembered that an essential element for success in diplomatic life consists in the members of the service being favorably received in the countries to which they are posted. If they are not so received, their usefulness is greatly diminished, and their mission is likely to fail.

"There are many countries where the position of women is very different from what it is in this country. With very few exceptions, the experiment has not been made by other countries, and the government is satisfied that in a large number of countries the innovation would not be welcomed."

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"OUR HOUSE puts its very worst foot forward," remarked a smartly dressed young matron recently. "That's because the entrance hall is small and squarish and very uninteresting. And yet what am I to do—there's just about no wall space to put anything much in the way of furniture on account of the doors. I would certainly be grateful for suggestions!"

We have that problem too and it's a hard one to solve . . . our entrance hall is rather large, too, which makes it worse. However, here's what we've done . . . On either side of one door we put two small but nicely detailed tables with an interesting pair of lamps. On the longest wall, which wasn't very long at that, we put the smallest little settee we could find—then in the center of the room we have a very pretty little round table.

Of course this plan wouldn't work in every entry. If it's too small, for instance, don't try to use a center table. And if there are two matching lengths of walls long enough, a pair of matching book cases are awfully nice. Sometimes a console table or a chest of drawers is a good piece for the hall—with a pair of small arm chairs or a pair of high-back chairs on either side of it. Mirrors are good in pairs on either side of a doorway . . . not only are they handy, but they give an effect of spaciousness that is desirable.

Mouth Infection May Be Treated By Simple Means

Building Body Resistance and Use of Oxygen Important.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutler.

The tiny animal beings—the cause of Vincent's angina—were probably first observed by the famous Dutch scientist, Van Leeuwenhoek, the inventor of the microscope. He described the "beasties" that he discovered in his own mouth and in the mouths of his friends.

For many years physicians have been puzzled by mouth and throat infections. Diphtheria, known as "askara," was greatly feared by the Hebrews, and when a case appeared in a community its occurrence was immediately heralded with a warning blast of the "shofar." It was not until 1898, however, that H. Vincent, a French physician, ascribed to a spiral-like animal form certain ulcerative lesions that developed in the mouth. Since his time the disease has been known as Vincent's or Plaut-Vincent's angina. A commonly used appellation is trench mouth.

Frequently Found.

These organisms are frequently found in the mouths of many of us. They do little harm unless the resistance of the body drops to the point where the tissues furnish a favorable culture medium. They may flourish in any mouth in which the mucous surfaces have been damaged by such conditions as spongy gums, pyorrhea, canker sores, tonsilitis, diphtheria, or scarlet fever. With lowered resistance, inflammation may arise along the gum margins and spread rapidly to other parts of the mouth and the throat. In some cases ulcers will form, the top being covered with a grayish appearing membrane. When this is removed the bed beneath appears bright red and bleeds easily.

We must understand that the Vincent organisms will not thrive unless there is some preceding disease or weakness. If the patient is attempting to exist on a diet low in vitamins or one that is poorly balanced, or if tuberculosis, or anemia from any cause is present, growth may be rapid, with ulcer formation. In other words, we may say that the parasites are carried in many normal mouths, but do no harm until they find broken, diseased, or weakened tissue upon which to feed.

The diagnosis is not difficult. If the infection is in severe form there will be a characteristic offensive odor to the breath from putrefying organic matter and, under the microscope, the spirals can be identified easily. If it is acute there is usually a fever ranging from 100 to 102 degrees Fahrenheit. Soreness in the mouth may be intense and, as a result, food cannot be taken. Swallowing is painful; in fact, the patient will dread the slightest movement of the tongue, cheeks, or lips. The tongue is often swollen, reddened and heavily coated. Gastric disturbances are common and there is a marked feeling of weakness.

Treatment, naturally, is based upon building up the resistance of the entire body. Local applications that will liberate oxygen are valuable. Hydrogen peroxide will remove bits of decayed tissue and powdered sodium perborate may be rubbed into the ulcers and the inflamed areas. Skilled dental attention is important. This involves the polishing of all rough surfaces and removal of the tartar and pockets of diseased tissues between the teeth. So many cases arise because of deficient vitamins that the use of brewer's yeast, cod liver oil and fruits is generally helpful. Sometimes hydrochloric acid is absent from the stomach and, in such circumstances, it will need to be administered by mouth before meals.

Unrecognized.

It is quite probable that many sore mouths are really unrecognized cases of Vincent's angina. For this reason, on the appearance of ulcers on the mucous membrane, tonsils, back of the throat, or about the teeth a diagnosis should be obtained as quickly as possible, as the condition may spread and involve larger areas. Care must be taken not to confuse the lesions with what are known as canker sores (thrush). Included in the investigation should be a thorough examination of the blood, as anemia is not infrequently accompanied by the symptom of sore tongue.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Man Would Marry Girl Knowing She Loves Another; She Asks: "Is It Fair to Him?"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 20 years of age and very much in need of a mother's advice. Since I have no mother, I feel you are the only one to help me. I have been reading your column for quite a while and think you are just grand, so please help me. Here is my problem:

* * * *

I have been going with a young man for almost two years. We are engaged to be married. But about three years ago I was very much in love with another young man. Let us call him A. He still comes to see me quite often. I am still very much in love with him, although he never speaks of marriage to me. He says he likes me too much to see me marry B.

* * * *

On the other hand, B knows A still comes to see me and also knows just how I feel about him. Even so, he wants to marry me. My father tells me by all means to stop seeing A. I know that loving A as much as I do, I could yet marry B and be true to him, but do you think it would be fair? Please help me as you are helping others.

Yours truly, WORRIED TWENTY.

DEAR WORRIED TWENTY: Since A knows of your love for him, continues to call upon you but never speaks of marriage, and furthermore insists on thrusting the oar of his opinion into your relationship with B, I think one may safely conclude he is a wholly selfish young man who should be given his walking papers.

* * * *

Since you are engaged to marry B, it is only right and proper that you should make an honest effort to forget A. And the only way to forget him is to stop seeing him and concentrate your attention on B. I think A is just playing a cat-and-mouse game with you. It flatters his vanity enormously to set your heart fluttering, even though he feels no response in kind.

* * * *

Of course, I know nothing about what kind of young man B is. I do not know whether he would make a good husband. I do not know how promising his future is; how well prepared he is to support a wife and family; whether in background, educational equipment and temperament he is well suited to be your life companion, and these are things which must be taken into consideration before you marry him. Don't marry him just for the sake of having a husband and a home of your own. Marry him, if at all, only because you are altogether convinced that you two could achieve a serene, well ordered life together; if you are sure you are mentally and physically compatible; if you are sure that he can and will love, honor and cherish you always; and that you can love, honor and be faithful always to him.

* * * *

Before a woman can hope to be happy as the wife of a given man, she must be sure of two things: She must be sure there is a bond of real friendship between them, of affectionate sympathy and honest understanding, and she must also be sure that mutual physical attraction exists. Given these two things, plus such practical considerations as assured modest income, mutual sense of responsibility and good character, she can marry knowing she is being fair to her husband-to-be, and knowing that she stands every chance of forgetting altogether any heartbreaker who has kept her dancing on the hot coals of uncertainty in the past.

* * * *

Until you have made up your mind definitely that you wish with all your heart to become Mrs. B., it may be just as well to put aside any thought of marriage. I believe your feeling for A is more infatuation than love, inasmuch as it is a holdover from adolescence, and I believe if you had the grit and common sense to put an end to his visits, you would soon outlive the emotion without marrying anyone. May I suggest that you stop seeing A altogether for six months, and try in the meantime to discover the depth and nature of your feeling for B. If at the end of that period you are still in love with A, don't marry B. But during that trial period, try to live, think, act and feel as though A did not exist.

* * * *

(Thank you for thinking me "grand.") M. H.

Suggestion for Lonely.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Inasmuch as many persons write to you desiring to make congenial social contacts, may I make a suggestion? I wish to call such correspondents' attention to the Wanderbirds Hiking Club. Every Sunday we take trips, which include jaunts through the woods, cross-country hikes, mountain climbing, moonlight walks, etc. Members of our club are unusually fine people and very congenial. Splendid contacts are made and newcomers are instantly placed at their ease. Many young persons newly arrived in the city have made friends through the club and eagerly look forward to each succeeding Sunday to pursue interesting acquaintanceships. I shall be delighted to give more information to anyone interested. I can be reached by telephone at COlumbia 3493-W, 1651 Lamont street northwest.

Sincerely,
(MISS) ROSE MARIE PETTA.

* * * *

DEAR MISS PETTA: Thank you for your letter. It may be the information herewith provided will net a response from many erstwhile lonely persons. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's page.

Married Women Facing Serious Job Jeopardy

THE SECURITY of the married woman and her job is in jeopardy, the National League of Women Voters declares in its latest analysis of the problem.

In a special published study under the direction of Mrs. Edith Valet Cook of New Haven, Conn., a Yale Law graduate, the League of Women Voters warns that employed married women are facing a serious crisis, threatening the social and economic position of the women themselves, the integrity of Government service, and the preservation of efficient conduct of private business.

The league decries the attitude toward married women in employment, claiming it to be "characteristic of that philosophy of government which we now know as fascism."

"Nor are we, in this country, immune, in spite of our democratic non-fascist institutions," the analysis says. "In many cities throughout the country, school boards have adopted a definite policy against the employment of married teachers, and a similar attitude has been taken by State and municipal officials in some sections toward the employment of married women in any Government positions.

"Such a policy is not only a grave injustice to the women concerned, but a serious threat to the efficiency of the Government service, because in the conduct of that huge enterprise . . . the widest possible latitude of choice is needed to find the best qualified persons, and to eliminate a large group of the population, such as married women, from the field of choice is a very serious blow to sound personnel methods."

Married women work for just about the same reasons married men do, Mrs. Cook's study points out.

"The fact that about one-third of all gainfully employed women are married means that these women are doing satisfactory work," the study reports. "Any attempt to oust them from their occupations would not only work a hardship on many families and individuals and result in useless economic waste, but would completely dislocate the business and industrial world."

How a Baby Grows — Creeping Part Two

By Dr. Arnold Gesell, M. D.

THE BABY LEARNS TO CREEP. He Goes on Fours, Before Twos. Uses Hands and Knees Before He Travels by Foot. At the End of the First Year, He Becomes a Biped. Today's pictures show the second stage in the baby's efforts at creeping. At 20 weeks, he was anchored to one spot, unable to make any progress either backward or forward. He is shown below, at 32 weeks, as he is able to pivot in a circle. At this age, his arms are more skillful than his legs and, by working them, he swings about in a circle.

Tin-Plate Mills Are Running at Full Capacity

Slackening in Auto and Sheet Orders Cuts Industry's Average.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 24.—Large orders for railroad cars, car material and tin plate, with tin plate mills now operating at capacity, featured the week, says Steel. The heavy equipment industries, farm tools and tractors, as well as the machine tool and allied equipment manufacturers gave evidence of sustained demand.

Automotive requirements were down slightly, reflecting the reduction of 8,300 units to 109,800 in automobile assemblies, and lowering sheet mill operations. The net result was a reduction of 2 points to 68½ per cent in the steel works rate.

Announcement of steel prices for third quarter is expected this week, to open books June 1. While some spokesmen for the industry have pointed out that the trend must be upward, in view of rising manufacturing costs, social security legislation and vacations with pay for wage earners, no definite statement was made by any producer regarding next quarter.

Some consideration has been given the fact that price changes in midyear would now synchronize with the automobile manufacturers' preparations for the change-over to new models affording them an opportunity to adjust their costs and selling prices.

Heavy Railroad Orders.

In the week 6,900 freight cars were awarded. This brought the total number for the month to 9,750, largest since 10,500 last December, and requiring 107,250 tons of rolled steel, and 39,000 tons of wheels and axles. Chesapeake & Ohio ordered 5,400; Norfolk & Western, 1,000; Pere Marquette, 500. Southern Pacific is inquiring for 2,800. St. Louis, Southwestern is in the market for 50 freight cars, 5 coaches and 5 locomotives.

After a temporary bulge in the preceding week, awards of structural shapes dropped again to 13,205 tons, near the average for the year. Inquiry came out for 35,000 tons for a floating dock for the Navy at Pearl Harbor, T. H., and 12,000 tons for a building in Radio City, New York. A survey of the oil industry indicates that $1,000,000,000 will be spent this year with other industries for material, including large tonnages of steel, principally structures.

Wall Street Is Clearing the Ground, but SEC, Margins and Taxes Becloud Outlook.

New York, May 24.—Measured by the average prices of stocks at the end compared with the beginning of last week, some further ground was lost. Declines were the result of slow erosion that usually comes from the absence of interest among speculators and a cautious buying policy by investors.

Stocks settled back a little because of the absence of bidders rather than because of any press for sale. Trading volume was small, at an average of well under a million shares a day, and except for preferred and certain other stocks in special positions, offered without regard to price, the range was narrow.

Stocks acted as though the selling storm which swept over them earlier in the month had completely passed, but while investment buying on a modest scale is reported, the scarcity of speculation is allowing prices to settle further in spots and is depriving the market of rallying power. That was shown in the trading of Monday, after the Supreme Court announced its decision that held the Guffey coal act unconstitutional.

That measure had been regarded as bad for the coal industry and as a menace to other industries in the setting up of a principle of control of wages, output and prices, with a tax weapon. However, Wall Street gave the news only a 15-minute rally in the stock market, after which the point or so gained in average prices was lost before the close of the market. The rally merely touched off selling prices among those who can leisurely reduce their accounts.

Trade Maintained.

Industrial news points to a well-maintained trade position, but this is not the season of advance. Lacking any stimulus from industry's side the markets have grown stagnant under the influence of a certain amount of trader baiting on the part of SEC designed to protect the investigating public; the political turmoil the uncertainties of the new tax legislation, and the unsettled state of foreign affairs. Markets might set about discounting further improvement in business before the end of the year, an eventual stabilization of currencies over the world, and the return of a little more common sense in Government as a result of the autumn elections, if given any encouragement.

Actually the lifting of margin requirements and the inclination of the SEC authorities to regard trading of a support nature as illegal manipulation, the constant investigations of stock movements, the publicity given operations and pool agreements by corporation directors, management and large operators have combined to drive out the speculator. He finds if he is operating on a large scale that it is no longer easy to draw in that public following without which he can get in but cannot get out. The hazing of stock market manipulators has much to commend it, but in so far as it reduces speculation to the point of giving stocks thin markets, more harm than good may be done. Business expansion must have free and liquid markets when markets stagnate, so does business.

Not much has been heard about second-quarter earnings, but they promise to be favorable in some leading industries, as for example, steel, automotive, railroad equipment, transportation, farm equipment, mail order and most of the consumption goods trades. Meanwhile the time is nearing when the soldiers' bonus money will give at least some fillip to retail trade, after which other billions of farm and public building payments will pour out over the land.

Economy Needed.

It has been shown conclusively enough that all that is of little value as a business pump primer. What is needed is Government economy and a balanced budget, but on the surface at least business ought to feel some stimulation from the increased spending. What it takes to settle the bill soon will be found out. The Senate has shown itself unable to swallow the Administration tax measure to eat into undivided corporation earnings in the amount proposed, but a tax bill now favored will lift the ordinary rate on corporation earnings to 18 per cent (enough to be felt severely by many companies), with a small penalty tax on undistributed earnings. On the whole the new Senate proposal looks sounder than the original House bill, but it is largely a matter of degree. What remains is a greater tax burden on business to pay for riotous squandering of the public resources.

Plans are being prepared for another huge borrowing operation by the Treasury next month, probably involving $1,500,000,000, partly refunding and partly to secure new cash for soldiers' bonus and other purposes. Only "orthodox" financing is promised (the Treasury has learned well enough that it can't proceed on any other lines), and Government securities have held fairly steady with the new issues in prospect. Gold continues to arrive, and the horizon still is clear of signs of an early upturn in interest rates; but for all that the market has begun to fear to follow up the advance in high-grade bond prices. Bond investors are paying less attention to inflation talk, but they fear to go deeper in interest rates.

Auto Record Predicted For First Half of Year

New York, May 24 (AP).—Alfred Reeves, vice president and general manager of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, said car and truck production for the first half of 1936 would exceed 2,575,000 units, a record figure for the period, with the exception of the first six months of 1929.

Reeves based his prediction on well sustained demand from the field following a visit to plants in the Michigan territory.

Kentucky Jerseys Set All-Time Record

Carrollton, Ky., May 24.—Averaging 465.80 pounds butterfat, 8,876 pounds or over 4,000 quarts of milk for a year of production testing recently ended, the herd of pure-bred Jersey cows owned by Perry B. Gaines at his Riverview Farms here, has made the highest average butterfat yield ever made in the United States by a Jersey herd averaging 50 or more cows in milk daily in an official herd test.

The record just completed exceeds the herd's own national Jersey record for herds averaging 60 or more cows in milk daily established in 1935 with an average yield of 423.39 pounds butterfat per cow, a record which is still a breed record for a herd of this size.

Department Store Sales at 5-Year Top

New York, May 24.—With department store sales at the highest level reached in almost five years, 1936 is expected to be the most active year since 1931. That mail order sales are likewise making a favorable start is evidenced by the 14½ per cent gain in March sales, as contrasted with the 9 per cent increase registered by department stores.

Continuation of these upward trends is to be expected, according to a new report in Poor's Industry and Investment Surveys. Increased consumer purchasing power, both urban and rural, promises to accompany any further progress of industrial and agricultural revival.

Average Tobacco Prices.

New York, May 24 (AP).—The Stich index of weekly average tobacco prices shows that United States type 12, grade B4F, flue-cured tobacco averaged 16.6 cents per pound for the week ended May 23 compared with 17.5 cents in the preceding week. In the corresponding 1935 week the average price was 24 cents per pound.

Business Tone Firm Despite Slower Pace

Auto and Power Recession Is Offset by Rise in Other Fields.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 24.—Although business lost a little weight during the week, its condition remained generally robust. On the favorable side of the scale were better than normal steel production and freight carloadings; on the other side were subnormal showings by the automobile and electric power industries. Heavier movement of freight owed its expansion largely to sharply higher shipments of Great Lakes ore.

Observers said the piling up of dealers' inventories played an important part in the drop of automobile production to 109,821 cars from 117,156 the previous week.

These various cross-currents of trade and industry were studied by financial analysts in the light of numerous straws in the wind, most of which drifted toward improvement.

Privately financed construction in the 37 States east of the Rockies rose to $130,000,000 in April, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation, the highest in five years and nearly double that of April, 1935. Publicly financed building for April was seen to have run forward approximately 100 per cent over a year ago.

Lumber Activity.

This news from the construction front was accompanied by a better demand for building material and a rise in lumber output for the week ended May 9, to the highest point since 1930.

Sentiment, as reflected in favorable dividend actions of corporation directors, continued to cast a rosy glow.

Fatter earnings in some instances had as their counterpart predictions of business executives that equities which have long lacked dividend props would in the not far distant future be put back on a paying basis.

Notwithstanding the sudden downswing of temperature in various parts of the country, retail trade moved forward. Wholesale activity, bolstered by a swelling volume of records for early summer goods, ran along at a faster pace.

The share market was thinly nourished throughout the week as traders kept to the sidelines to await the outcome of current tax legislation, the Supreme Court's elimination of the Guffey coal act, and France's uncertain financial position. Shares were under a little pressure early in the week and, although some recovery was turned in later, losses were not fully made up.

All classes or domestic corporation bonds were somewhat lower, but the United States Government list ran forward in some instances to new highs since issuance.

Ease in Federal loans was in some banking quarters seen as a result in part of the continued expansion of excess bank reserves, owing to the continued inflow of gold, most of which came from France.

Am. I. G. Chemical Earnings Increase

New York, May 24 (AP).—Net earnings of American I. G. Chemical Corporation in the fiscal year ended March 31 amounted to $3,302,939 after charges, interest, etc., equal to $4.17 a share on the "A" common stock and 42 cents on the "B" common stock.

This compares with $2,527,687, or $3.22 on the "A" and 32 cents on the "B" stocks in the previous year. The corporation is a holding concern.

Transit Revenues Ahead of Last Year

New York, May 24.—Revenues of the transit industry, based on telegraphic reports received from a representative group of transit operating companies, for the week ended May 16, 1936, recorded continued improvement over last year. Transit Journal's Revenue Indicator stands at 105.96 as compared with the corresponding week in 1935.

For the week ending May 9, 1936, the Indicator was 106.12.

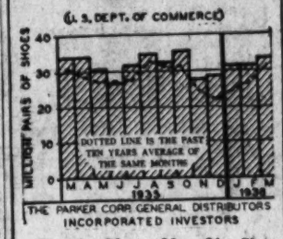
Shoe Output Exceeds Last Year's Record



Boston, Mass., May 24.—Shoe production last year reached an all-time yearly peak, while during the first quarter of this year 3½ per cent more shoes were turned out than during the first quarter of 1933. Retail sales are passing well ahead of last year.

PWA Profits Increase.

The Public Works Administration has increased to $7,892,099 its profits from the sale of bonds held as security and $13,559,016 to the interest collected on other bonds, making a total of $21,451,115, Secretary Ickes reports.

Grade Fatalities 294 in 2 Months

The number of highway-railroad grade crossing accidents as well as the number of resultant fatalities for February, 1936, showed an increase over the same month in 1935, the safety section of the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday.

Grade crossing accident deaths in February numbered 130 as against 110 one year ago. Persons injured in highway-railroad grade crossing accidents rose from 443 in February, 1935, to 453 in the same month in 1936. The number of accidents rose from 350 in February, 1935, to 389 in 1936.

Fatalities resulting from highway-railroad crossing accidents totaled 294 in the first two months of the present year, an increase of 60 compared with the January-February period in 1935.

Brill Receives Order For 8 2-Motor Buses

New York, May 23 (AP).—J. G. Brill Co., of Philadelphia have received an order for eight 39-passenger, two-motor trolley buses from the Peoples Railway Co., of Dayton, Ohio.

The new order will increase to 27 the number of Brill trolley buses in Dayton, 19 of which are in service on lines of the Dayton Street Railway Co.

Lumber Production Sets 6-Year Record

Washington, D. C., May 24.—The lumber industry during the week ended May 16, 1936, stood at 71 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 71 per cent of 1929 shipments, compared with 72 per cent and 68 per cent, respectively the previous week. Reported production during the week ended the 16th of 6 per cent fewer mills was 1 per cent below the previous week; indicating a total weekly production the highest since 1930.

Shipments and orders were 5 and 10 per cent, respectively, above the preceding week, orders being heaviest of any 1936 week to date, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufactures Association. Some of the shipment and new business activity is due to anticipated higher freight rates after June 30.

Associated Telephone.

New York, May 24.—The Associated Telephone & Telegraph Co. reports for 1935 a net income of $143,205 after all deductions, compared with $9,016 for 1934.

Gasoline Supply Found Top-Heavy

New York, May 24 (AP).—John M. Lovejoy, president of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, today stated that both record consumption and restraint on the part of refiners will be required this summer to bring the top-heavy gasoline stocks down to a reasonable figure.

In a special survey of the industry, Lovejoy urged that production of crude be brought immediately into line with Bureau of Mines figures, and that the interstate oil pact be carried out.

He pointed out that oil production is running around 120,000 barrels a day above current demand, and after adding to gasoline stocks through the winter at "unprecedented rates," the industry added 81,000 barrels of crude to stock every day in March and 61,000 barrels daily in the first 18 days of April.

Republic Steel Calls Donner Bond Issues

New York, May 24 (AP).—Republic Steel Corporation has called for redemption on July 1 at 102½ and accrued interest, all the outstanding assumed first refunding mortgage sinking fund bonds, series "A" and series "AA," of Donner Steel Co., Inc.

BONDS OF THE 3¼% SERIES OF 1936 — The Bonds will be issued under the Company's Consolidating Mortgage to be dated May 15, 1936 and will, in the opinion of counsel, be secured by a direct lien upon substantially all the real property (including generating stations), transmission and distribution systems now owned by the Company, subject to the liens so far as they attach of mortgages securing outstanding bonds of $11,797,000, and to certain further exceptions described in the Offering Prospectus. The Mortgage contains provision for the issuance, under certain restrictions and (except for an additional $10,000,000 of bonds) only for specified purposes, of additional bonds, of this or other series, all of which as to lien would rank pari passu with these Bonds. The Mortgage permits the Company, in certain instances, to dispose of property covered by the Mortgage without notice other than application to the Trustee, and also provides, in other instances, for release of property by the Trustee without notice to Bondholders.

The provisions of the Mortgage may be modified (subject to certain limitations set forth in the Offering Prospectus) by vote of holders of 66⅔% of the outstanding Bonds.

UNDERWRITING — Subject to certain terms and conditions, the Underwriters named in the Offering Prospectus have severally agreed to purchase these Bonds from the Company at 99½%, or a total of $54,725,000, plus accrued interest. Such Bonds are to be offered to the public at 101½%, or a total of $55,825,000, plus accrued interest. The underwriting discounts are 2%, or a total of $1,100,000.

Price 101½% and Accrued Interest

The Underwriters have agreed to purchase these Bonds when, as and if issued, and subject to the approval of Messrs. Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed, counsel for the Underwriters, and to certain further conditions. The validity of the franchises and titles of the Company and its subsidiary, and certain other matters, have been passed upon by counsel for the Company. It is expected that delivery of Bonds in temporary form, exchangeable for definitive Bonds when prepared, will be made at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. on or about May 29, 1936, against payment therefor in New York funds.

As more fully set forth in the Offering Prospectus, the Underwriters have authorized the purchase and sale, in the open market or otherwise, of Bonds for their several accounts, either for long or short account within the limits and during the period set forth in the Agreement between themselves.

Further information, in particular financial statements, is contained in the Registration Statement on file with the Commission, and in the Offering Prospectus which must be furnished to each purchaser and is obtainable from the undersigned.

House Faces Action Today On Red Rider

Rep. Blanton Expected to Seek Vote Delay by Filibuster.

Foes, Rallying Quorum, Confident of Victory in Heated Fight.

Parliamentary tactics are expected to decide the fate of the "little red rider," repeal of which will be sought today when the Sisson bill is brought up on the floor of the House.

The hundreds of parents, school officials and members of patriotic groups who are expected to crowd the galleries for what promises to be the bitterest battle over District legislation in years, are likely to learn quite a bit about parliamentary procedure as foes of the rider seek to block an anticipated filibuster led by Representative Thomas L. Blanton.

Confident that if the bill is brought to a vote, it will pass overwhelmingly, Representative Fred J. Sisson, its author, has rallied supporters to insure the presence of a quorum throughout the day. Without such a quorum of 100 members Blanton could tie up debate by repeated roll calls as he did when the Ellenbogen rent bill was being debated.

Even under the most favorable conditions for foes of the rider, Blanton will have at least three opportunities to demand roll calls. First, when the House acts as a committee-of-the-whole for District affairs, second when the House will go out of committee to vote on a motion to limit debate, and, third, when the House returns into committee.

If a quorum of members can be kept on the floor through these roll calls, rider opponents are confident they can beat the filibuster.

Speeches in favor of repeal of the rider that forbids the mention of communism in local schools are expected to be short as many Representatives have requested speaking time. However, all members have been given ample opportunity to familiarize themselves with the issue.

Copies of the hearings before the District Appropriations sub-committee have been distributed to all members by Blanton, while Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, has mailed each member a copy of the public hearings held by the sub-committee on education.

$32,000 Is Raised By Civic Committee

More than $32,000 has been collected by the Greater National Capital Committee during its current drive for funds, Frederick P. H. Siddons, chairman of the campaign, announced yesterday. The committee is attempting to obtain $50,000 before June 8.

"This record," said Siddons, "is ahead of previous years and shows that business and professional men believe that the committee's work has been instrumental in building a 'Greater Washington.'"

Twenty-four teams are working in the campaign. Of these, three already have reached or exceeded their quota.

It was pointed out that the committee not only brings visitors to the city, but is actively engaged in the promotion of special events, such as the July 4 celebration, Halloween Parade, President's Cup Regatta, Cherry Blossom Festival and other events.

Scotland Yarders Here to Study American Methods

Three of England's highest police officials are rounding out a two-month investigation of American police methods with a study of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the District police. Left to right, Henry Battley, superintendent of the criminal record division of Scotland Yard; Col. Frank Brook, chief of the constabulary of England and Wales, and Ronald M. Howe, deputy assistant commissioner of the Yard.

Extremists Aid War, Loughran Says in Sermon

Stresses Ideals and Sacrifice in Address Marking Memorial Day.

Extreme pacifism serves, not the cause of neutrality, but that of the enemy, the Rev. Joseph S. Loughran, pastor of Cleveland Park Congregational Church, declared in a Memorial Day sermon yesterday morning.

He served warning to all who prefer peace to war that "ideals and a willingness to sacrifice for those ideals" still constitute the elements of national greatness.

"When sincere people declare that they will oppose every war, or any kind that their country is engaged in, we may wonder if such a proposal is a responsible, deliberate act or an emotional outburst, not really meant," Loughran told his parishioners.

"If the latter, it is unworthy of thoughtful people. If the former, you are announcing that if your country is wantonly attacked in any kind of civil insurrection, or foreign assault, you are serving notice that you will do your utmost to assist the Nation's ruin. Does anyone really mean that? If so, let him be prepared to suffer the contempt of every man to whom America is worth defending."

If America is attacked, non-resistance is no longer non-resistance, "but becomes active co-operation with the enemy," the pastor pointed out. Such a man, he said, has no country.

"Anyone of that mind is announcing that it is all one to him whether America remains America, or ceases to be. What can be his inner thoughts on Memorial Day, when a grateful Nation honors the men and women who made the supreme sacrifice for the preservation of America's freedom and national unity?

"Which is more criminal, a war waged in the interest of justice and freedom, or passive non-resistance to the aggressive enemies of justice and freedom? Confronted with this issue none can remain neutral. We must try to discover more clearly, the national meaning, and the moral value, of our country as the object of our devotion: and our devotion as the perpetuation of our country."

Play to Be Presented,

The University Players of Universalist National Church, Sixteenth and S streets northwest, will make their final appearance of the season in a production to be given tomorrow and Wednesday nights. The drama is entitled "Chintz Cottage."

British Police Officers Praise U. S. System on Trip to Capital

We Are Ahead of England in Use of Teletype and Radio Cars, Three Ranking Officials, on Two-Month Tour of America, Point Out.

American methods of police organization were praised yesterday by three high British police officials. Two are from Scotland Yard and the third is chief of the constabulary of England and Wales. They are rounding out a two-month tour of investigation of police organization in this country and Canada.

Police in the United States have advanced further in the use of the teletype system and radio cars than in England, while criminal records in this country "if anything, are over-texentive," reported Col. Frank Brook, head of the delegation. With him are Ronald M. Howe, deputy assistant commissioner of the criminal investigation department of Scotland Yard, and Harry Battley, superintendent of the yard's criminal record division.

Print System Impresses.

The relative ease with which noncriminals in this country submit to fingerprinting, compared with citizens in England, impressed the delegation.

"You seem to have gotten a pretty good start in the business," observed Howe. "In England we have not dared suggest it, there is so much opposition to the idea."

Although praising American detectives as an "extremely capable thought the British ones were betbody of men," Brook indicated he ter trained.

"We put our men through a special school," he said, "while you attach them to the police force. We emphasize training more than you do."

U. S. Problems Different.

Crime problems in this country are different from England's, Brook pointed out. Where in the United States there are gang killings, bank robberies and kidnapings, in England the most common crimes are shop lifting, house breaking and petty larceny.

"We have about two dozen murders a year," he added, "but they are of the sort in which a husband shoots his wife out of jealousy and then tries to commit suicide. Those crimes solve themselves, although we do have occasional murders that call for high-caliber policemanship."

Members of a commission appointed more than a year ago by the British home secretary to study police organization in England and Wales, the delegation decided to amplify these studies by a first-hand investigation of police methods in this country and Canada. Their tour, begun in New York, took them through Detroit, Chicago, California, Canada, Lansing, Mich., and Albany.

The wide variety of police organizations in this country intrigued the delegation. In the cast of scientific aids, Howe pointed out, they found laboratories not only under the control of the police, but some attached to universities and others that belonged to private scientists.

"In England our scientific aids are all under the control of the police," he pointed out.

Arriving Saturday night, the delegation took a "day off" yesterday for a tour of the city, stopping for lunch at the Lorton Penitentiary.

Today the delegation will go through the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Metropolitan Police Department. The trio will sail for England Thursday.

District's Jews Hold Services For War Dead

Jews of Washington paid tribute to their war dead yesterday.

They gathered at the Adas Israel Congregation Cemetery for merorial services for the war dead in Jewish cemeteries. Ceremonies were under auspices of the Jewish War Veterans, Washington Post, No. 58.

Several hundred met on the lawn of the cemetery under a hot sun to hear Representative Dow W. Harter, of Ohio, pay tribute to the Jews who died in the war.

Representative Harter also pleaded for a strong national defense, but prayed for peace.

He said Jews were a patriotic race, ready to answer the call to arms in any national emergency. He cited instances of bravery of Jews during the World War, enumerating the number who had been decorated for bravery.

The U. S. Army Band furnished music.

Albert W. Jacobson, commander of the Washington Post of Jewish War Veterans, presided.

While attendants listened with bowed heads, Rabbi Abram Simon, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, called the roll of Jewish war dead in Washington.

Communism Is Assailed By Freeman

U. S. Must Make Choice for Future Welfare, He Tells 5,000.

Pershing Is Present at Massing of Colors in Amphitheater.

Bishop James D. Freeman stood under the shade of a giant elm in Washington Amphitheater yesterday and told 5,000 people, gathered to honor the World War dead, that America soon must choose between Christianity and communism.

He spoke at the annual massing of colors, sponsored by the Military Order of the World War. Sitting in tiers of benches, which sloped down the theater's lawn to the speakers' platform, were civilians and soldiers who gather each year for the colorful ceremonies.

"What our choice is to be," Bishop Freeman declared, "is yet obscured to our vision."

He said America must choose between the precepts of "our fathers" and the political philosophy of the Leftists.

"We must make one of two decisions," he said. "One of them will break our civilization."

Representatives of nearly every patriotic organization in America were present in uniform. They carried flags. Gen. John J. Pershing was there. He sat in the shade of trees which shelter the speakers' platform, listening to the ceremonies.

Bugle and Drum Corps.

The United States Marine Band played. The audience joined in hyms.

The services began at 4 p. m. A drum and bugle corps marched from the cathedral, followed by hundreds of flags carried by the organizations represented. For nearly 20 minutes the parade of flags continued to stream from inside the cathedral, on down into the amphitheater. In addition to the patriotic organizations, the United States Marine Corps, the United States Army and Navy were represented.

Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, commandant of the United States Coast Guard, was first to speak. Hs urged rededication to those who lost their lives in the World War—and in all wars.

Bishop Freeman then mounted the speakers' stand. He wore a long robe. His voice was carried across the lawn by an amplifying system. He said:

"The men we seek to honor here today would hardly recognize the America they fought to preserve."

Spiritual Wealth.

He said economic security was not the measure of a nation's wealth. That wealth which never dies, he said, lies in spiritual values.

"We have been too proud, to arrogant, of our material wealth. Luxuries have left us soft and flabby.

"Let us not delude ourselves. Let us not believe that cleverness and cunning and the ability to adapt ourselves to condtions are the measure of America's success.

"We can best honor our dead by adhering to those ideals and precepts they themselves carried with them to death. On this memorial Sunday let us remember them—their ideals.

"By the graves of the dead we are here to keep our tryst."

House Pages Debate Virtues Of Skates at Shannon Dinner

Fiery Oratory Featured by Clash on Jobs Which Would Be Created or Lost by Change; Boys of Senate Jeered at Banquet.

Representative Joseph B. Shannon, big-hearted Democrat of Kansas City, Mo., gave his fourth annual "adjournment banquet" for 25 page boys of the House of Representatives last night in the Shoreham Hotel, and then sat back and chuckled as they engaged in a fiery debate.

The question was: "Should Pages of the House of Representatives Be Equipped With Roller Skates?"

The debate, as do so many that actually take place in the House, brought forth a lot of noise, but no action.

Johnny Jurgensen, of New York, led off for the affirmative. He said he was in favor of skates because running errands was "hard on the feet."

Edmond E. Walsh, of the District of Columbia, opposed the use of skates because of possible casualties.

Pictures Collisions.

"Picture a page skating down a corridor in the Capitol," said the eloquent Master Walsh, "and picture him running into a member of the House coming out of an office room. I don't think I have to say any more."

Master Walsh couldn't have said more had he wanted to, because each speaker was limited to one minute.

Rodney Bowman, of Ohio, swung the debate into economic fields.

"Gentlemen," he said, a bit pompously, "think what is going to happen if we use skates. You will throw millions out of work if you stop wearing out shoe leather."

Alabaman Replies.

Walter Morgan, of Alabama, was quick to reply to this.

"Think of the people it would put back to work making roller skates," he said. "Somebody has said that if we skated we would be falling down and tearing our pants. That would encourage prosperity, too. It would help the tailors and the laundries."

Albert A. Payne, of Texas, thought the Roosevelt Administration could stand a little economy, and he pointed out that by using skates the House could get along on half as many pages as are now used.

Noisy protests arose at this suggestion. They came even from lads who favored skates. Amid cries of "Point of order!" the debate was closed, with a decision put off until Representative Shannon's next banquet.

No Caste System.

Representative Shannon told the House pages that he wanted them to do something to remove the emphasis from Senate pages. He cited several instances where magazine writers had written about Senate pages as if they were the only ones on Capitol Hill.

"We must not have any caste system in this country," said Shannon.

The House pages agreed with him by hissing at the next mention of Senate pages.

Representative Shannon gave the boys one brief bit of advice. It was a quotation, he said, from his great hero, Thomas Jefferson.

"Do not bite at the bait of pleasure till you know there is no hook beneath it."

Policemen Roy E. Blick and W. G. Fawsett arrested the men for allegedly selling untaxed liquor. Blick said the men would make sales to customers on the street.

The men charged in the liquor case gave their names as John O'Brien, 33, first block of New York avenue northwest; John Deidrick, 25, of the 1100 block I street northwest, and Charles Avery, 36, of the Astor Hotel. All were released under $1,000 bond.

Miss Brooks was a passenger in a car driven by Charles Munro, Sixth street northeast. Lyman E. Smith, of Rising Sun, Md., was the driver of the other car. Neither was held.

Car Hits Signal Post.

Sanders Harris, Negro, of 1411 Corcoran street northwest, was cut on the head and face when his automobile struck a traffic signal light post at Fourteenth and Q streets northwest. He was treated at Freedmen's Hospital and taken to Second precinct.

Marie Gross, 16, Negro, was taken to Casualty Hospital from an accident at Forestville, Md., in which she suffered a broken arm and severe cuts.

Four persons were injured in a head-on collision on the Baltimore boulevard near Hollywood, Md. All were treated at Casualty Hospital for cuts and bruises. Injured were Charles Green, 26, Beltsville, Md.; Lionel Taylor, 20, of Branchville, Md.; Annie Brown, Negro, 4717 Foote street northeast, and M. C. Fuller, Negro, of the Foote street address.

His Skull Fractured.

Allen Arnold, of Cherrydale, was taken to Georgetown Hospital suffering from a fractured skull as the result of being struck by an automobile operated, police said, by Carey Wright, of the 700 block of Sixth street northwest.

Wright was released on his personal bond pending a hearing before County Judge B. M. Hedrick Wednesday. No charge was placed against him.

Moor's Car Demolished.

The new car of Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore was demolished early yesterday when, driven by his chauffeur, it collided with another car on the Lee Highway, snapped an electric power pole and came to rest against a tree.

Lights in the section of Fairfax County near Centerville were cut off for several hours as a result of the accident, which occured soon after midnight. The chauffer, Maughs Roberson, and his companion, O'Neil Sutphin, both of Fairfax, were cut on the face and head. They were treated at Georgetown Hospital.

The other car was driven by Walter Simons, also of Fairfax. He was uninjured.

Stephen Foster Film.

Shady Figures People Picture Of Bogus Lover

Honest Crook Is Pivotal Character in Romance at the Columbia.

"CHAMPAGNE CHARLIE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a screen play by Allen Riskin, featuring Paul Cavanagh and Helen Wood, with Thomas Beck, Minna Gombell, Herbert Mundin, Noel Madison and Montagu Love. Directed by James Tinling. At Loew's Columbia Theater. Reviewed Saturday evening by W. A. Whitney.

With no particular claim to cinematographic greatness, yet the possessor of an intertaining story, creditably produced and acted, "Champagne Charlie," like many another picture made to complete a definite production schedule, offers an hour of relaxation and enjoyment, with Paul Cavanagh as a suave crook whose shady operations include matrimony, when the dowry is sufficiently large.

A roster of good, though perhaps not "box office' performers enact the story of Linda Craig, millionairess, is woo'd and practically won by Champagne Charlie who really is after the $1,000,000 dowry so that he may square himself with his two confederates. All is going well—even with the advent of true love—until Charlie discovers that Linda is the daughter of his own, one-time fiancee, and then he conveniently has himself killed in an automobile accident that Linda and her childhood sweetheart may live happily ever after.

Employs the "Flash-Back."

To make a more dramatic narrative, these essential details are brought out, via the "flash-back" method, when Linda tells all to save the late Charlie's valet from being held for a murder which he had confessed, but had not committed.

To what might, from these rather colorless words, seem to be a trite and twice-told tale, Mr. Cavanagh and his company add a vitality which raises it from the commonplace and imbues it with a freshness and enthusiasm somewhat beyond the intrinsic value of the fable. Here Mr. Cavanagh combines the elements of suavity and sartorial perfection with a reading of his part that lends the character of the gambler-groom a real significance.

The lady involved in the case is one Helen Wood, apparently a newcomer to the screen. Personable, with pleasing voice and some histrionic talent, Miss Wood makes for charm in the love interest of the drama.

Mundin Goes to Work.

The valet of the piece is Herbert Mundin, whose delightful cockney accent adds further to the effectiveness of his delineation. In the scene where the killing, and its subsequent "confession," is shown, Mr. Mundin reveals a heretofore hidden facet of his ability—that of being a dramatic actor of no mean parts.

Noel Madison and Montagu Love furnish the meaner villainy, while Thomas Beck, earlier of the Monumental City, does the juvenile lead. Minna Gombell, as a friend of Miss Wood, adds her usual biting comments to the narrative.

"It Happened in Washington," the Post-sponsored motion picture featuring Senator Henry F. Ashurst, James Pendergrast and Dorothy Ramspeck, is palying a repeat engagement at the Columbia. "Manhattan Tapestry" presents an all-color revue of the Gay White Way, featuring Henry King and Xavier Cugat and their orchestras, Georges and Jalna and others. The Will Rogers Memorial Hospital Fund trailer and a release of the Metrotone News round out the program.

Hodgson Revue

"GRANDMA'S DIARY." The Madolin Smithson Hodgson School of Dance and Expression presents its twenty-sixth annual spring recital in an introduction, prologue and two acts in eight scenes, staged under the direction of Lilla S. Hipsley, Clifton K. Hodgson, Elmer Hipsley and Laura Wallace. Orchestra under the direction of Meyer Goldman, with Miss Wallace at the piano. At the National Theater. Reviewed Sunday evening by W. A. Whitney.

With unusual precision, exhibiting the best training thus far presented this spring, the Madolin Smithson Hodgson students presented their spring recital last evening at the National Theater, offering a long, but colorful and varied program of songs and dances before an audience of more than 1,200.

A slender thread of continuity ran through the entertainment entitled "Grandma's Diary," wherein was revealed in terms of the dance her experiences of the past. In eight scenes, grandmother's life was re-enacted by some four-score performers, from mere tots to those with as many as eight or nine years with the group.

The outstanding scene was, perhaps the "Oregon Trail" suite, with various routines based on the Indian motif. Especially noteworthy on this of any program was the unusual—and unexpected—adagio routine by Elmer Hipsley and Helen Chum, a number of beauty and precision rare on any school's program.

Three Awards Made.

Many other solo and ensemble numbers studied the program, and, though worthy of special mention, individualized reference must perforce be omitted. The production was much too long, but it was well produced and enthusiastically received.

Following the revue, William Hannan presented several prizes, as follows:

Girls class prize—Patsy Collegeman.

Boys' class prize—Junior Foster.

For assisting in class—Genevieve Rogers.

For attendance—Ten years, Zelda Wightman; nine years, Roma Lee Haun; four years, Louise Maynard and Louise Burgess; two years, Vivian Scott and Jane Johnstone, and one year, Edith Graff, Jean Schultz and Audrey Perkins.

For ticket selling—Loraine Nicholson, Jane Johnstone, Louise Maynard and Natalie Soloman.

Little

"LIVES OF A BENGAL LANCER." Paramount picturization of a story by Francis Yeats-Brown, adapted to the screen by Grover Jones and William Slavens McNutt, featuring Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone, Richard Cromwell and Sir Guy Standing, with C. Aubrey Smith, Monte Blue, Kathleen Burke, Douglas Dumbrille, Akim Tamiroff, Jameson Thomas, Noble Johnson, J. Carroll Naish and Mischa Auer. Directed by Henry Hathaway. A revival.

From the grimly forbidding romance of Somerset Maugham's "Of Human Bondage," the Little Theater this week travels half way around the world to the heroic exploits of England's soldiery on one of the empire's wildest and most hazardous frontiers—the fabled Khyber Pass.

While there is a feminine character of some prominence in this fascinating narrative, the burden of the story falls upon the shoulders of three modern musketeers—Capt. McGregor, Lieut. Forsythe and Lieut. Stone, son of the colonel of the regiment. These roles are played with utmost effectiveness by Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone, Richard Cromwell and Sir Guy Standing.

The novel background of the action lends unusual color to a drama that moves with the constant suggestion of impending crises and so generates much the same quality and measure of suspense that attended the developments in Belasco's vivid vignette of Indian army life, "The Drums of Oude."

Among the film's able supporting artists are C. Aubrey Smith, Kathleen Burke, Monte Blue, Douglas Dumbrille, Lumsden Hare and others admirably attuned to the requirements of a camera drama of distinctly British flavor.

The bill for the new week at the Little is completed by the usual assortment of short-reel subjects and news events.

Gayety

"GIRLS FOR SALE." Public Welfare picture, made in co-operation with the General Commission to Fight White Slavery, with English dialogue and subtitles by Edward A. Gallner. "PAWNS OF PASSION." Picturization of a story by Olga Chekova, directed by George Melford. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

Presenting a discourse on the white slave traffic, the summer formen-only season at the Gayety continues. "Girls for Sale" is a German production on which is superimposed a feminine journalist's interview with a vice squad chief, thereby making the actual picture revealed in flash-back technique.

The companion feature is "Pawns of Passion," another murder mystery of passing interest. On the stage, Doctor Barber continues his discussion of matters of social hygiene with living models to demonstrate certain points.

Nelson B. Bell

About The Showshops

BELL.

At the cordial behest of the Loew interests in Washington, given persuasive voice by Mr. Ray Bell—no relation—a fair working majority of the local drayma desks, Ann Gillis and Ted Church, of the Columbia Broadcasting System; John Heiney, the "J. H." of this eminent journal's radio columns, and divers and sundry kindred others tumbled out in the middle of the night to attend a noon breakfast in honor of Gertrude Niesen in the chromium and blue glass rooms of the Variety Club in the Willard Hotel yesterday.

For several of us, this was merely the renewal of a friendship begun upon the occasion of an earlier visit of Miss Niesen and her father to Washington two years ago. She is still the same interesting, exuberant and "exotic" young woman now that she was then—even more so, perhaps—and her pappy has lost nothing of the hail-fellow-well-met spirit that always has characterized an indulgent father who is tremendously proud of his daughter. After the current engagement at Loew's Fox Theater, the two of them are going fishing again—of all things!—just as they did last time.

Of her recent engagement as a featured songstress in the Shuberts' production of the "Ziegfeld Follies," Gertrude speaks only with the utmost enthusiasm. It was a swell tour of duty on Broadway, even if the "Follies" did turn out to be a hoodoo production. Despite suspicions to the contrary, the show was closed, while still going at top speed, as a direct result of the serious illness of Fannie Brice, the star. Before leaving for Washington, Miss Niesen visited Miss Brice in the hospital where she was confined by a severe attack of arthritis, one of the most painful and most stubborn diseases known to medical science.

The only thing concerning which the visiting contralto voices no enthusiasm whatsoever is opening day of her present engagement at the Fox. Everything went wrong, to perpetuate the jinx that had first manifested itself the night before. Upon arrival in the Capital Thursday midnight, her pet Boston terrier, Sooky, was lured away and has not been seen since. The dog has been her constant companion for the past five years, having been raised from a 3-month-old puppy, never owned by anyone else. The loss of her pet—and any dog lover knows how she feels—being mauled backstage by a heavy drop curtain and one or two other minor distractions constitute the reason no encore was sung in response to all that applause at the first Friday afternoon performance.

But Gertrude's luck isn't all bad. Not so long ago, she won $100 at one of those crazy "gift nights" at a Broadway night club, simply by plucking the right number out of a hat, or something. Then, too, she had a few megs riding on Bold Venture in the Kentucky Derby. So what!

Starting with a bang a week ago Thursday, the Wilson Line steamer City of Washington has set an all-time passenger record for the first week of the season's operation. The opening Moonlight Cruise on May 14 was sponsored by the Washington Junior Board of Commerce and set sail with a full passenger list. The Mount Vernon trips have been similarly to capacity business, by reason of the great number of student groups visiting the National Capital at this season. And now comes Marshall Hall Park in full swing to boost the record still higher.

Buts to You!

Everybody thought John Boles was going up into the Blue Ridge Mountains after closing his week of personal appearances at the Fox last Thursday night—but he took the river trip down to Norfolk with Division Manager Carter Barron, instead.

In the current newsreels, when Haile Selassie reads his message to the world in French, one rather expects his daughter to mutilate the King's English beyond all recognition in its translation—but she speaks with an Oxonian accent that is practically perfect.

When Sammy Lewis and Patti Moore "stopped the show" Friday afternoon and Sammy had to make a speech to quiet the audience, a great many thought he was kidding when he referred to this as his home town, —but Washington is his home town, Sammy being the brother of Goldie Ahearn, Joe Turner's matchmaker and haberdasher to the more sartorially effulgent of the sporting fraternity.

Panjandrum Steve Cochran, of the National, thought his plans for a summer theater had been kicked over the heart for keeps—but along came Brook Johns and was Steve surprised that he had never thought of that before!

Most people think dancing girls have to have trim, slender legs—but take a look at that Elida Ballet!

The general public may have thought that private screening at the Mayflower was the only chance there ever would be to see the Department of Agriculture's "The Plow That Broke the Plains"—but it will be on the next bill at the Belasco, with Jan Kiepura and Gladys Swarthout in "Give Us This Night."

You may think that Radio City Music Hall Glee Club, at the Earle, does nothing but sing from fixed post—but their costumes, evolutions and stage business are almost as effective as their splendid harmonizing.

When Gertrude Niesen left that breakfast at the Willard yesterday, she dashed out to 2600 University place in response to a phone call that they had her dog—but it wasn't Sooky and the search is still on.

By this time, you probably fear this business is going on for days—but it's not.

From Forest Hills, Long Island, comes a cordial note from Ann Ayres, eminent impresaria, reading, in part: "I have not done a thing in the theater all year but I think this summer I'll go to Lawrence Langer's Country Playhouse in Westport. I helped organize it six seasons ago and wish I had stayed with it, instead of running my own theaters and losing my—well, I don't wear one, but anyway . . ."

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, May 24.

ALICE FAYE becomes a member of the Movie Boners' Club by telling of a boner that she saw in the flicker, "Frisco Waterfront." Alice, it seems, gets to see all pictures.

IDA LUPINO.

She tells of a scene in which many newspapers with different headlines are placed on top of each other. Every paper has exactly the same single column headlines, and although they were papers supposed to be telling the news of about five years ago, a headline reads: "Town send Club Meets Tonight." Now, Miss Faye insists that the Townsend Club wasn't meeting then because there wasn't any Townsend Plan.

George Brent enrolls for membership with a flicker flaw from "A Message to Garcia." Says George, there is a scene in which the pursuing Spaniards on horseback pass near Barbara Stanwyck and John Boles. Miss Stanwyck and Mr. Boles are standing in water up to their shoulders. Yet when the soldiers gallop by, the same water is only up to the horses' ankles. Movie magic.

Now for the fans. Gary Cooper in the flicker, "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," is being fitted for a suit in his bedroom by his tailors when he is summoned to a meeting downstairs. Cooper's valet gives him a dark robe which he puts on. Cooper's trousers are of a light shade, writes Rosanne Duffey. In the next scene, Gary is running down the stairs and his trousers are now the same color as the robe. "I am certain of this," writes Rosanne, "for I was watching Cooper's trousers."

★ ★ ★ ★

Francis Lederer in the flicker, "One Rainy Afternoon," is thrown into jail before the opening of his show, claims Arthur Murray. Roland Young, the show's producer, and Hugh Herbert run around Paris trying to get Lederer released. Apparently, they are successful, because Erik Rhodes shows Ida Lupino a newspaper in which a headline says that Lederer has been freed. The next scene, however, shows Roland Young and Hugh Herbert just coming to the jail, where Lederer is still a guest. The newspapers which are printed by the movies are wonderful.

In the flicker, "The Milky Way," Aaron Gold writes: "The middleweight championship fight between Harold Lloyd and William Gargan is supposed to be fought at the Polo Grounds. At least that is what the fight managers and the fighters were told. However, this fight, like the others, was held at the same arena. The sign read, 'Fight Tonight at Stadium.' The producers probably said, 'Who'll know the difference?' I did."

★ ★ ★ ★

Concerning the flicker, "The Golden Arrow:" "When Hortense Burke Meyers is registered in Town Talk Magazine the spelling of her name is shown as Hortense Burke Myers. And who should note this more readily than I? Cordially yours, Carol Myers."

In the flicker, "Roaming Lady," writes Lillian Sorkin, a firing squad is seen through a window about to execute several prisoners. The commands of the officer are heard. Yet when Gen. Fang, who is in the room, pulls down the shade, the sound of the volley does not register.

A soundproof window shade, eh?

When Arabs rebel against the authority of the French, this is the sort of far-flung action that lends thrills of high adventure to the climaxes of "Under Two Flags," the new Twentieth Century-Fox production, adapted from the novel by Ouida, coming to the screen at Loew's Palace Theater on Friday. Ronald Coleman, Claudette Colbert, Victor McLaglen and Rosalind Russell are cast in the pivotal roles of Tony Brett, Cigarette, Maj. Doyle and Lady Venetia Cunningham. Then, of course, there are such supporting players as Gregory Ratoff, Nigel Bruce, C. Henry Gordon, Herbert Mundin, John Carradine, Lamsden Hare, Fritz Leiber, Onslow Stevens and a few score more of equal eminence.

Responses to an Opening No Trump.

After your partner has opened the bidding with one no trump and you hold a six and major suit and about one plus honor tricks in the hand, game is probable, yet you cannot make a forcing take-out of three of a suit with less than two honor tricks. Therefore, you simply bid game immediately.

For example, over your partner's opening one no trump bid you should bid four spades when holding:

♠KQ8542 ♥8 ♦Q743 ♣52

Or, you should bid four hearts when holding:

♠532 ♥AJ8642 ♦1074 ♣5

Carlessness.

Strangely enough, experts are more apt to "throw" a contract that is absurdly easy to make, requiring nothing but care, than contracts which offer intricate problems of play. The reason is that with an apparently overwhelming array of aces and kings even experts become careless, assuming at a glance that the contract is foolproof, instead of applying the acid test of analysis.

South, dealer.

	♠A943 ♥Q972 ♦653 ♣K6
WEST ♠QJ85 ♥84 ♦KQ107 ♣J75		EAST ♠None ♥J1063 ♦AJ82 ♣98482
	SOUTH ♠K10762 ♥AK5 ♦94 ♣AQ10

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	2 spades	Pass
4 spades (final bid)

West opened the king of diamonds and, receiving the eight from his partner, continued the suit. Declarer ruffed the third round and, after merest glance at dummy, led the six of spades from his own hand to dummy's ace. His feeling of security was rudely dispelled when East failed to follow suit. He was helpless now to prevent West from winning two trump tricks for the contract's defeat.

A simple safety play would have insured the contract. The moment West followed on the six of spades lead, declarer should have realized that the one chance of being defeated lay in the possibility that the adverse trumps all were in one hand and, since West followed suit, they could be only in his hand if so divided. Thus, instead of putting up dummy's act of spades, the six should have been allowed to "ride," or if West covered with the eight, dummy's nine should have been played.

True, the adverse spades might lay 2 and 2, and no trick need be conceded in that case, but since declarer could well have afforded to concede a trump trick and still fulfill contract, safety measures were decidedly in order.

Aid for Cathedral Urged by Stokes

Imitation of the spirit displayed by those who built temples of Middle Ages was urged yesterday by the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, a leader in the Washington Cathedral campaign for funds.

He recalled how in an earlier century when a cathedral was built artists contributed their skill, bricklayers and stone masons gave their craftmanship, farmers lent their oxen and carts and the faithful, rich and poor, gave money.

The Washington Cathedral, he added, is anxious to have the support of thousands of persons in every walk of life. He pointed out cathedral memberships range from $2 to $1,000 a year.

Brown's 2-Hit Try Blanks Detroit

Indians Win, 7-0; Rowe Blasted Off Mound in Two Innings.

Trosky Gets 9th Homer of Season; 16,000 See Contest.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 24.—Lloyd Brown limited the Detroit Tigers to two singles today as the Cleveland Indians blasted Schoolboy Rowe from the mound in two innings to win an easy 7-to-0 decision before 16,000 fans.

The only hits made off Brown's southpaw slants were by Walker in the first inning and by Burns in the seventh. He struck out three batters and issued four walks. Brown also batted in two runs.

Cleveland jumped on the Tiger ace for three runs in the first inning. Milt Galatzer opened with a double. Knickerbocker grounded out and Hale flied out, but Earl Averill followed with a single to center to score Galatzer from third.

Hal Trosky followed with his ninth home run of the season, scoring Averill ahead of him.

A single by Galatzer with two out in the second inning and a double by Knickerbocker produced a fourth run. Rowe retired at the end of the inning, succeeded by Vic Sorrell.

Leslie's 5 Hits Help Giants Win, 13-5

Philadelphia Bows as New Yorkers Crack Out 21 Safeties.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 24.—Paced by Sam Leslie, who pounded out five hits for a perfect day at bat, the New York Giants made good use of their 21 hits today to defeat the Phillies, 13 to 5.

Leslie, enjoying his best day of the season at the plate, drove out a homer, a triple, a double and two singles. The Giants started slowly, picking up one run in each of the second, third, fourth and fifth innings, scored twice in the sixth, added one more in the seventh and then broke loose with a six-run rally in the eighth.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Boston, May 24.

NOTHING about the man suggested that he could beat a rheumatic snail over a distance of ground in a fair race. He was a roly-poly gent, fat about the middle, and great beads of perspiration stood out upon his face as he wheezed up the stairs into the Fenway Park press box this afternoon to have a look at a ball game. I never would have known him.

POVICH.

At least, I would never have suspected, offhand, that he was Jimmy Connolly, the greatest miler ever to wear the blue and gray of Georgetown University, but closer inspection of that Irish pan, and I knew there was no mistake. Connolly it was, now a successful insurance broker in Boston, the only man to hold a middle distance track record that was not broken by Paavo Nurmi, the flying Finn.

Connolly is proud of that one record of his that Nurmi failed to wipe out. Paavo tried it once, but the mark of 2:42 3-5 for the two-thirds mile that Connolly hung up in old Madison Square Garden in 1923 withstood the assault of the talented Finn.

Back in 1923, the half-pint Connolly was the kingpin of all college milers. John D. O'Reilly had sent him out on to the track in Boston one evening 13 years ago and he won the intercollegiate mile in the record time of 4:17 3-5. The next year, after making the United States Olympic team, he finished third to Nurmi at New Amsterdam in the Olympic 1,500 meters.

There never was a runner like Nurmi and there never will be, to hear Connolly tell it. And when you hear Connolly tell it, you are listening to a guy who ran against Nurmi in 55 races when the flying Finn was smashing records almost nightly while traipsing about the country in exhibition races.

"That guy was no less than a marvel," related Connolly. "When I went on tour with him for five months in the winter of 1925, I saw enough of his heels to realize he was probably the greatest runner who ever lived. At any distance from the 1,000 yards to the marathon he could probably whip anybody they sent against him on any given night.

"He was smart. That watch he used to carry with him was no stage play. He used that timepiece in every race. And his big idea in glancing at his watch as he ran was to keep himself from running too fast. If he had ever really let himself out, I think he'd have done a mile in 4:05."

Connolly became no less than excited as he recalled Nurmi's feats on the track. No competitor apparently ever had more admiration for a rival than the little Boston Irishman has for Nurmi. With gestures he went on to tell more of the Finn:

"Most any coach would have thrown him off the track if he didn't known it was Nurmi.. Why, the fellow defied every orthodox style of running. He'd bounce along on his heels and use the flat of his foot and everything, when every college coach in the country tells a trackman to run on the balls of his feet. But Nurmi knew his own style. If you ever noticed his track shoes, you'd see that he had special flat heels built on 'em to help his type of running.

"He was the only man I ever knew who was a mechanical runner. He could run a mile in 4:12, and run each quarter exactly. He'd run the quarter in 1:03, the half in 2:05, the three-quarters is 3:09 and finish up in 4:12 as if by clockwork. Well, it really was clockwork, but I don't think another man could ever run four quarters in the same even time.

"Why, when I was on tour with him and he had to break records every night to please the public, Nurmi was no less than a marvel. Knowing that he had to break a record six nights a week, he'd draw the finish so close that he'd never bust a mark by more than one-fifth of a second, so it would not be too tough on him the next time."

Connolly admits he is amazed at the time now made by college runners in the mile. Glenn Cunningham's record of 4:06 3-5, made at Princeton three years ago, is well nigh unbelievable as far as Connolly is concerned. Only Nurmi could have run the mile in those figures, he had believed.

"But give Nurmi back his youth, and give him the same conditions on that fast Princeton track," said Connolly, "and he'd run that same mile in 4:05. He never had anybody running against him who ever did the mile in less than 4:12. I'd have liked to have seen him really pressed to win a race. Why, he went out one day and ran the mile in 4:08 in practice, without a watch in his hand or anybody to pace him."

Paris, May 24 (AP).—Minna Kovac, of Yugoslavia, and Jeanne Peyre, of France, set some sort of a record, at least for Roland Garros stadium, in exchanging the ball 278 times for one point during their second-round women's singles match in the French hard court tennis championships today. Sewell's Homer in Ninth Brings 7th Victory Over St. Louis.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 24.—A ninth-inning home run by Luke Sewell, his second of the season, settled a pitchers' duel between Babe Phelps and Tommy Thomas today and gave the Chicago White Sox a 7-to-5 victory over the St. Louis Browns in the final of the series.

It was Phelps' fourth win and Chicago's seventh victory in eight starts against the Browns this season.

Phelps yielded 11 hits to 9 by Thomas, but Sewell's timely homer, together with another by Rip Radcliff, with one on in the fifth, gave the Sox the advantage. Manager Charley horse in the sixth and may charley horse in the sixth and may be out for several days.

A crowd of 8,500 saw the game.

Cards Defeat Cubs To Remain in Lead

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 24.—Pitching flawless ball, Leroy Parmelee hurled the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals to a 7-1 victory today over the Chicago Cubs before 22,500 Sunday fans, the largest home crowd of the season.

Avenging a 7-2 setback yesterday, Frankie Frisch's redbirds tied up the series with a 17-hit assault that drove Cudt Davis from the box in the seventh. The triumph left the Cardinals still a half game in front of the second-place New York Giants.

Lazzeri Sets Mark, Yanks Win, 25-2

Second-Sacker Hits 3 Homers, Drives In 11 Runs as A's Bow.

Crosetti Gets Two Circuit Blows, DiMaggio One in 19-Hit Attack.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 24.—The New York Yankees, revived their "murderers' row" of a few years back today and slaughtered the Athletics, 25 to 2, with Tony Lazzeri driving in 11 of the runs for a new American League record.

Five A's hurlers were helpless before the 19-hit assault by the Yankees. Lazzeri, who had three homers in yesterday's doubleheader, smashed out three more today, two with the bases loaded, and added a triple before the bombardment ended.

Frank Crosetti helped himself to two circuit clouts and young Joe DiMaggio had one.

Meantime, Monte Pearson was limiting the Mackmen to seven hits, pitching air-tight ball after the A's scored both their runs in the opening inning.

Lezzeri eclipsed the loop runs-batted-in record held by Jimmy Foxx, now of the Boston Red Sox. Foxx set his old mark of nine in Cleveland. The major league record of 12 is in the record books as the work of "Sunny Jim" Bottomley.

The Yanks started slowly, but shifted into high gear with the opening of the second inning. They scored clusters of five runs each in the second and fourth and six each in the fifth and eighth to run up the most one-sided score of the year in either major league.

George Turbeville managed to get by the New Yorkers in the first inning, but was shelled off the mound in the second, when Lazzeri hammered his first four-bagger. He was followed by Bill Dietrich, Rookies Bullock and Fink and, finally, Woodie Upchurch. But it made no difference to the Yank batters. They found all easy.

Furr, Dublinsky Start Summer D. C. Fighting Tonight

Stadium Bout Is Season Opener

Dublinsky Has Notable Achievements in His Record.

By Bill McCormick.

The first of what local lovers of larrup hope will be a steady parade of good fight gates probably will be drawn through the turnstiles at Griffith Stadium tonight as Phil Furr, District welterweight champion, makes passes for 10 rounds at the elusive Harry Dublinsky, of New York.

All indications, such as street corner comment, advance sales, and other straws in the wind point to gross receipts in excess of $5,000 for the first bout of the regualr outdoor season.

There has been a demand for a Dublinsky-Furr fight here ever since Harry scored a sensationally quick knockout over Bob Wilson, then Furr's closest rival in the District, last summer. Wilson twice went the distance with Furr, which should give you some idea of what fight fanatics are expecting to see when Phillip tackles the nationally-ranked lad from New York.

Dublinsky Is Upsetter.

Just 27 years old, Dublinsky has scored some of the most startling upsets in the history of the modern ring. Perhaps his greatest feat was in soundly trouncing Lightweight Champion Tony Canzoneri in 1934.

In 1931, Harry also scored another surprise by holding the present champion, Barney Ross, to a draw. He also has scored a draw with Wesley Ramey, considered by many the leading contender for the lightweight title.

Among others whom Harry has defeated are Bruce Flowers, Roger Bernard, Johnny Jadick, Tracey Cox, Billy Hogan, Steve Halaiko (by a knockout) and Eddie (Kid) Wolfe. He also scored a draw with the sensational Bobby Pacho.

Furr, who has a chance to swap swats with Welterweight Champion Barney Ross here if he wins, has been headed steadily for the top for many a month now. His winning streak has seen him score knockout wins over Steve Halaiko and Sid Silas and decisions over Halaiko, Cary Wright and Bobby Wilson.

Prelim Card Is Worthy.

Although not bound by agreement to make any certain weight, Furr expects to tip the beam at about 142 or 143—his best punching poundage. Dublinsky, who reached Washington several days ago to finish his training, also has given every indication of being in his finest fighting fettle.

A preliminary card worthy of the main bout has been arranged to bolster the top spot contest. Ben Brown, who made a hit here before leaving for the South, will return to the wars in one preliminary. The semifinal will find Bob Wilson, still one of the best attractions in Washington, swinging in the direction of a boy who knocked him out the last time they met.

Another highlight of the card will be the debut of Charley Loughran, kid brother of the Philadelphia Phantom, Tommy Loughran. Ray Walsh, a pupil of the great Pete Reilly's also will make his local debut on the card.

POST PREDICTIONS.

Bouts are rated from A (yoo, hoo, Goldie) to G (boo, boo, Ahern).

MAIN EVENT—Phil Furr, District welterweight champion, vs. Henry Dublinsky, New York; 10 rounds (non-titular). Rated C. Dublinsky has a nasty left hand which will bother Phillip no end—if the District title-holder allows him to use it. However, Phil seems determined to wade in mercilessly, swinging lefts and rights continually. If he does that, he should almost be able to name the round in which he will put the chill on Dublinsky—and he'd better do it quick, as Harry is a slow starter, but poison once he gets warmed up to the task at hand. We stake our all on Furr to do the right thing.

SEMIPINAL—Bob Wilson, Florida, vs. Jack Duffy, Philadelphia, welterweights; 6 rounds. Rated C. Bobby was doing all right against Duffy in a previous bout when the Philadelphia flogger opened a cut over the red-head's eye, forcing the referee to halt the action. Bobby should remember to duck this time and beat Duffy, but only after the fight of his life.

PRELIMINARIES—Ray Nash, New York, vs. Young Raspi, Baltimore, lightweights; 6 rounds. Rated C. Nash is a Pete Reilly protege and Pete does not fool with any bums. Raspi is tough, rough and rugged, but Nash should be able to handle him.

Johnny Dean, Charlotte, N. C., vs. Fritzi McBride, Philadelphia, lightweights; 6 rounds. Rated C. This one will be closer than a barber shop shave, with McBride probably getting the nod at the finish.

Charley Loughran, Philadelphia, vs. Ben Brown, Atlanta, Ga., middleweights; 6 rounds. Rated C. Brown hits too hard for most middleweights, even including the brother of the immortal Tommy.

Philadelphia Ace Teams With Pollard to Take Doubles Crown.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 24.—Harold McGuffin, the Philadelphia tennis ace, who lost a chance to win the men's singles trophy in the thirtieth annual Old Dominion Tennis Tournament because of a sudden attack of leg cramps, returned to competition, teaming with Paul Pollard, of Lynchburg, Virginia's singles champion, to win the men's doubles championship.

McGuffin and Pollard played a postponed semifinal match this morning, beating Cliff Miller and Bob Cabell, of Richmond, 2—6, 6—2, 7—5. In the afternoon they defeated Ellis Keiles and Price Colgin, of Baltimore, 8—10, 6—2, 6—2, to gain the title.

In the mixed doubles, Harold Bowman, of New York, winner of the men's singles crown, and Mary Cootes, of Alexandria, last year's defending champion, and this year's runner-up, paired together to beat C. Alphonso Smith, of Charlottesville, and Mrs. Hugh Rowan, of Washington, for the title, 6—3, 6—4.

Billy Shea Retains Schoolboy Golf Crown and Post Trophy

Victor Beats Sharkey, 3 and 2

Western High Captain Leads Gonzaga Youth Most of Way.

By Dave Herman.

Billy Shea is still the best school boy golfer in and around the Nation's Capital.

The 17-year-old Western High captain retained his metropolitan schoolboy championship and the beautiful Washington Post Trophy yesterday at Congressional Country Club's course by defeating 15-year-old Buddy Sharkey, of Gonzaga, 3 and 2 in the tournament finals.

Never down, up on his opponent virtually all the way, Shea played only fair golf to land his second straight title.

Sloppy golf was mixed with good golf, as the curly-haired champion needed par in for an 80 when he closed out Sharkey on the sixteenth green, and the Gonzaga player needed par in for an 83.

Shea Finishes Strongly.

Both golfers putted badly on the first nine, save for one long putt that Shea trundled in from 25 feet for a birdie 3 on the sixth hole. Whereas Shea was a bit more erratic with his putter, Sharkey was off form with his approaches to the green. He developed a weird hook which didn't help him locate the pin.

Shea finished like a champion, shooting the last four holes in even par, winning three of them, after taking no less than six strokes on the par-3 195-yard twelfth.

What took the wind out of Sharkey's sails was Shea's splittin' iron second that finished 10 feet to the right of the hole on the fifteenth. Billy rammed in his putt for a birdie 3, went three up, and played safely for his 5½ on the sixteenth to end the battle.

Sharkey won three holes all day from Shea—the seventh, eleventh and twelfth, where he squared the match.

Shea Takes Lead.

Shea got the jump on the first hole, winning with a 5 when Sharkey knocked his second out of bounds. Shea went two up with a par 4 on the fourth, Sharkey going over the green with his second. Shea 3-putted the fifth for a 6. Sharkey knocked his second into a ditch and they halved in sixes. Then Master Shea popped in a long one on the sixth for a birdie to go three, only to 3-putt the next hole for a 5 and a loss.

Sharkey had a chance to cut down on Shea's lead on the ninth, where he fired his iron to within 4 feet of the hole, only to 3-putt for a par 3½. Shea went 2 up.

The Gonzaga golfer captured the eleventh with a par 4. He took the short twelfth with a 4, after both were trapped from the tee. Trouble with Billy was he missed his trap shot, took a 6.

After driving 330 yards on the 511-yard thirteenth, Sharkey played a poor iron that caught the trap on the right. He failed to get out in 3, dropped the hole to Shea's par 5, and Shea went 1 up again. Two up went Shea with a par 3 on the fourteenth and 3 up at the fifteenth, which he birdied.

In the morning semifinals, Shea needed par in for a 73 in walloping George Flathers, of Wilson High, 5 and 3, and Sharkey eliminated the medalist, Alfred Shorb, of Montgomery Blair, 5 and 4.

Prizes and The Post Trophy were presented by Frank Emmet, father of local schoolboy golf.

Palais Royal could do no better than play a 12-12 tie with Lansburgh Bros. yesterday in the Department Store League of The Post Sandlot Association, but went into undisputed possession of first place. Hecht Co., which was tied for the league lead, dropped to second place with a 7-3 defeat at the hands of the championship Kann's Club.

The league leaders scored two runs in every inning but the first, eighth and ninth but Lansburgh came back in the eighth and ninth to tie the count. In the last half of the ninth Pitcher Joe Hartman saved his own ball game by slashing a single to center with men on second and third, scoring them for a 12-12 result. The teams had to relinquish the diamond at this point.

With a line-up bristling with college stars, Kann's knocked Manager Paul Messink of Hecht's out of the box in the fifth inning after scoring three in the fourth and three more in the next frame. The hitting of Waverly Wheeler, of the University of Maryland and Harry Bassin of Georgetown, spelled Hecht's ruin.

Kann's was trailing 1-0 in the fourth when McInery dropped McCarthy's line drive to start off a rally. Bassin singled and he and McCarthy advanced on an infield out and scored on Wheeler's single. An error by English on Cuozzo's grounder figured largely in scoring Wheeler.

Another error by English paved the way for three more runs in the fifth and Messink went to the showers. Roddy Bell yielded two runs in the seventh to Hecht's but throttled the rally at that point.

Chevy Chase Wins D. C. Division Of Md. Golf Handicap Matches

Chevy Chase Club won the District division of the Maryland State handicap team golf championship yesterday at its home course, walloping Kenwood Golf and Country Club, 14½-to-3½.

Chevy Chase will meet the winner of the Baltimore division next Sunday for the title.

Not one match did Chevy Chase yield. Dick Weaver and Buddy Tew saved the Kenwooders from a complete rout by breaking even with Emmons Smith and Jasper DuBose.

Frank Reeside and Page Hufty, carving out a best ball of 69, trimmed Levi Yoder and Russ Hollebaugh, of Kenwood, 2½-to-½, while Ralph Quinter, Chevy Chase invitation winner, and Reeve Lewis, jr., scored two points against Ted Rutley and Gene Pittman. Quinter scored an approximate 73.

Walter Shapiro, who teamed with Golf Chairman Robert Stead, jr., to take 2½ points from L. Hill and D. Hopkins, did himself proud with a 74.

Results:

Frank Reeside and Page Hufty (Chevy Chase), 2½, Levi Yoder and Russ Hollebaugh (Kenwood), ½.

Ralph Quinter, jr., and Reeve Lewis, jr. (Chevy Chase), 2, Ted Rutley and Gene Pittman (Kenwood), 1.

Emmons Smith and Jasper DuBose (Chevy Chase), 1½, Dick Weaver and Buddy Tew (Kenwood), 1½.

Carding a best ball of 65, Roland Mackenzie and Roger ePacock, proamateur team of Congressional, defeated Cliff Spencer and Martin F. McCarthy, of Beaver Dam, 1 up in a thrilling exhibition match before several hundred spectators at Congressional.

Spencer and McCarthy had a 66, going out in 32 to take a 1-up lead. Due to the heavy traffic on the course, the four contestants played the first nine a second time, and Mackenzie squared the match with a birdie 4 on the tenth, and Peacock followed with a birdie 3, thanks to a 30-footer on the eleventh for the 1-up advantage. The remaining seven holes were halved.

Feature of the Peacock-Mackenzie shooting was the fact that there wasn't a 5 on their score.

Bethesda-Blair Contest Tops Schedule

Three Schools to Wind Up Baseball Seasons in Week's Card.

Montgomery County's annual spring feature, the Bethesda-Blair baseball game, tops a big 13-week event for the county schools that finds Montgomery, Bethesda and Sherwood winding up their schedules. The game is for the unofficial county title and is a renewal of a bitter rivalry that has seen Blair win four years in succession.

Montgomery High School ends a rather disastrous diamond campaign today at Georgetown Prep, while Blair and Bethesda meet in a tennis match at Columbia. The big game is on tap tomorrow at Garrett Park, with Bethesda as host, while Damascus treks to Ellicott City on the same day.

Wednesday Bethesda and Devitt have a golf match with Bethesda and Montgomery meeting in tennis at Rockville. Bethesda winds up its baseball campaign against the Maryland Frosh Thursday at College Park, Blair visits the National Training School, Rockville's tennis team visits Blair and the latter's golf team plays Bethesda the same day.

Friday Blair plays its last intra-county game at a Damascus, Sherwood goes out of the county to meet Hyattsville and Blair's tennis team winds up a thus far unsuccessful campaign at Western.

Louis Is Sure or Indifferent, Workout Disappoints 3,000

By the United Press.

Lakewood, N. J., May 24.—A serious case of over-confidence or indifference—it's difficult to tell which—cast its spell over the mighty Brown man, Joe Louis, in today's workout before one of the largest crowds ever to watch him in training.

With nearly 3,000 persons packed into the snug little arena bordered by pine trees, Louis boxed seven rounds in preparation for his scheduled 15-round bout against Max Schmeling at Yankee Stadium June 18. Only on brief occasions did Louis flash the devastating attack which buried Max Baer, Primo Carnera, King Levinsky, Paulino Uzcudun and others in the resin.

Most of the crowd was made up of admirers from Louis' own race. They came here from miles around, and sat in the hot sun nearly an hour waiting for him to make his appearance. A Negro jazz band blew hot tunes to keep the crowd quiet.

The long wait and the sun had the crowd on edge and as soon as Louis climbed into the ring, the spectators started calling for action. There was another delay brought about when photographers took pictures of Sam Langford, the nearly blind "Boston tar baby," and Louis.

Louis' first opponent was Lou Williams, a 256-pound Negro from Atlantic City. Williams took a dive with the first punch, which wouldn't have hurt a flyweight. Williams wouldn't get up and they carried him out.

Florida Avenue Braves Whip Premiers, 12 to 8

The Premier Senators, leaders of the Northeast Loop, lost a hectic game to the last-place team, the Florida Avenue Braves, 12-to-8, yesterday. Larry Ehrlich was the star for the winners, getting four hits at as many times at bat, including a homer, two doubles, and a single. Weinberg was the losing pitcher, and Altman was the winner.

The Premiers were without the services of Lou Evry, who pitched a no-hit, no-run game the day before yesterday. In the other game of the loop the second-place Colombians defeated the N. E. Orioles, 9-to-2.

Radio Juniors Win.

The Georges Radio Juniors chalked up their fifth victory of the season yesterday on the North Ellipse, whitewashing Hillcrest Pharmacy, 18-to-0. Woods, pitcher for the winners, struck out 11 men and contributed a home run in the second inning.

Barnett Among Pro Tourney Leaders

Cox Has 76 in Philadelphia Invitation Affair; Fraser Leads.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 24.—Bob Barnett, of Washington, was among the 22 select players who posted scores of 75 or less today in the opening round of the Philadelphia Profesionals' annual invitation golf tournament over 71-par Woodcrest Country Club course.

Barnett posted 37-37—74, only three strokes behind Leo Fraser, an "unknown" of Seaview who led the field with a 35-36—71.

Wiffy Cox played the course with a 37-39—76.

Fraser turned in a par performance to lead the field of 84 amateurs and professionals. He will be one stroke up on his nearest competitors tomorow as the second round of the 54-hole contest begins.

Behind him by just one stroke were Dick Renaghan, of Moorestown; Joe Coble, of Philadelphia; Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia, and Craig Wood, the New Yorker who finished within two strokes of a tie for the Metropolitan Open title yesterday. Each shot a 72 and led Johnny Hayes, of Iron Rock, by one stroke.

Literally bunting their way into the lead of the National City League of The Washington Post Sandlot Association, the Union Printers outmaneuvered the Dixie Pigs yesterday on the South Ellipse to win a 6-to-3 victory before some 3,000 fans.

With the championship Blue Flame Valets and the Heurich Brewers standing idle because of a brewery outing, the Printers forged into the lead in the games won column of Section A with three wins and no defeats. Meanwhile, Section B of the league came across with a quartet of games which all but stole the show from the other division.

Both leaders of Section B, the Ross Jewelers and Nolan Motor Co., won sensational victories. The Jewelers came from behind in the last of the ninth to beat out National Novelty with a three-run rally and win, 9 to 8. Nolan Motors won a 12-inning battle from the District Grocers also, 9 to 8, in a thrill-packed fracas on the East Ellipse.

One Other Game.

The only other winner of a game in Section A was Plaza Wine & Liquor Co. which came from behind with two runs in the last half of the ninth to take a 4-3 decision from Woodmen of the World Elm Camp. A forfeiture marred the day for Section A, with the promising game in West Potomac Park between the Shady Grove Barbecue and Miller Furniture turning into a forfeit victory for the Barbecuers before it got started. The collapse of Right Fielder Bum Enright of the Plaza team while racing for a high fly in the seventh, featured the game between Plaza and the Woodmen.

The Furniture club was unable to put nine men on the field. Eight men made an appearance and the Barbecuers waited from 2:30 p. m. to 3:30 for the Millers to complete the team. It was the first forfeiture the Furniture club has made in its 15 years of organization. John Miller, a member of the club, was giving a blood transfusion in a hospital to Carey Maupin, Miller left-fielder, who is in a serious condition as the result of injuries suffered when an ice-box fell on him last week.

Plenty of Bouts.

The Union Printer victory was reeking with strategy. Trailing 1-0 going into the fourth, the Printers started a bunting at a great rate, getting three runs chiefly by this method. They added two more in the fifth largely by the same tactics.

The three runs which the W. O. W. Elms scored on Plaza came at the expense of the unfortunate Mr. Enright. In the fifth inning, Charles Booker, W. O. W. pitcher, lifted a high fly to Mr. Enright's territory. Mr. Enright ran in on it and the fly sailed far back over his head for a home run, the Elms' first counter of the game.

In the seventh inning Booker walked and Barbour connected for a high drive to rightfield. Enright gave chase valiantly but ended up in a heat and the fly went for a hit. The umpires and Nate Miller and Whitey Lee carried the prominent basketball official off the field and Hamie Newman replaced him.

Plaza scored its winning runs with the count 3-2 against it when Kiefer walked, Ed Healy beat out a bunt and Steve Thompson walked filling the bases whereupon Harry Wilshire slashed out a double to drive in the tying and winning runs.

Old Manhattan Beer and Regal Clothing went into a tie for second place with an easy victory apiece. The Beermen trounced Postal Telegraph, 18-to-3, and Regal pounded out 23 hits to beat Woodmen of the World Oak Camp, 20-to-6.

U. S. Chances Nil in British Golf

By the United Press.

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 24.—Retirement of Lawson Little from the simon-pure ranks left the United States with hardly a ghost of a chance of bringing the British Amateur golf crown back as opening rounds of the fiftieth annual tourney begin tomorrow.

There are only six Americans included in the 268 entrants, third largest list in history.

Not one is conceded a chance to capture the championship Little held for two years.

Five of them drew first-round byes, but the draw still was considered unfavorable for them.

Green Takes Skeet Shoot With 98

Roseland, N. J., Captures Team Honors in Tournament.

Cracking 98 out of 100 targets, Harry Green, won the North-South skeet shooting championship at the National Capital Skeet Club yesterday. The Roseland, N. J., quintet took team honors with 473 out of a possible 500.

Class B was won by F. Ramsdell of Washington, who shattered 86 birds out of 100. H. G. Walters of Washington and W. P. Tannehill of Staunton, Va., tied for second place with 95. Walters won the toss for second prize.

Green bagged 25 straight in his first round, missed 1 each out of the next two rounds, then shattered another run of 25 straight down the stretch to win out by a single bird from a trio of other marksmen who had 97's.

These were L. C. Delmonico of Morristown, N. J., Frank A. Kelly of Orange, N. J., and Ken Ellis of Hot Springs, Ga. Choosing to flip a coin for second place rather than shoot off the deadlock, Delmonico found the luck with him.

Hartford Second.

The Roseland Club's 473 was just two birds better than the mark of Hartford's quintet of marksmen, while the Loantaka Club of Morristown, N. J., was third with 466.

I. N. Cox of Towson, Md., won the class C, competition, by winning a 25-target shoot off with B. A. Cummings and C. C. Clark, of Washington, after all had tied at 91 in the regular event. Cox broke 20 of 25 as against 18 for the other pair.

Nats Beat Bosox, 12-4, for 4th in Row

back into the box that kept him in the ball game.

In both the first and second innings, the Sox collected a pair of hits off Russell, but he started one double play that choked 'em off, and Cecil Travis out in leftfield contributing a sparkling throw to third to catch Rick Ferrell that turned 'em back scoreless in the second inning.

But in the third, the Sox assumed a 2-0 lead after Russell had walked Almada and the inexperienced Travis dropped Cramer's easy nings, the Sox collected a pair of by Cooke and Foxx did the two-run damage.

Nats Tie Score.

The Nats bounced right back to tie the score. Myer drew a walk and was forced by Stone, who was resting on base when Kuhel pounded a tremendous fly over Almada's head into the new seats in rightfield for a homer.

During the next four innings Russell held the Sox scoreless, but the Nats continued to busy themselves against Marcum, and Wilson, who succeeded him. Russell eased himself out of a terrific spot in the fourth, when, with the bases full, he threw up his gloved hand to knock down Cooke's line drive and throw Cooke out at first before pausing to nurse his badly bruised hand.

Russell himself started the Nats on a four-run rampage in the fifth, when he was safe at first after Foxx dropped McNair's low throw of his ground ball. Two were on when Jake Powell beat out a hit to Werber.

Lewis Socks Homer.

There was much speculation in the stands as Lewis arived at bat. Whether to move the runners up with a sacrifice or try for a hit, was the question. Lewis settled it definitely. The rookie swung on Marcum's first offering and rammed it on a low line into the rightfield seats 415 feet away, scoring Russell and Powell ahead of himself.

The Nats didn't let up though. Before the inning was over Stone pounded a triple to right that pounded Marcum out of the box, and Travis doubled high against the distant centerfield wall to put the Nats in a 6-2 lead.

Extra-base hitting was the Nats' motif of the day, apparently. With two out in the sixth, the pesky Powell slammed a triple into right center and Buddy Lewis dropped a looping triple into left to score him. Myer beat out a hit to Werber scoring Lewis, and the Nats were in front 8-2.

Nats Look Like Great Team.

Two were out when the Nats came up with four more runs in the eighth. Powell drew a walk and Lewis slammed out his third straight hit, a single to center. Then the Nats began to look like the greatest ball team that ever stepped on a field. Powell and Lewis negotiated a slick double steal, Buddy Myer drew a walk, Stone scored two runs with a single to center, and with Hill at bat, the Nats came up with a second double steal, Myer scoring from third and Stone going to second.

Stone eventually scored on Hill's single to left.

The Red Sox picked up two runs in the eighth when Foxx doubled with the bases full after a wild streak by Russell, but that rally fell something like eight runs short of tying the score.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.

By Morgan Baker.

Charges of Representative Robert L. Bacon (Republican) of New York, that "President Roosevelt has added more than 250,000 persons to the full-time Federal pay roll without increasing the civil service lists," are termed "ambiguous by Government officials.

BAKER.

Harry B. Mitchell, president, Civil Service Commission, points out that employes in 14 New Deal agencies are under civil service, listing them as follows:

Soil Conservation Service, Public Utility Regulation, Social Security Board, National Labor Relations Board, Railroad Retirement Board, Bituminous Coal Commission, Motor Carrier Bureau of the Interstate Commerce Commission, certain positions in the CCC camps, the Securities and Exchange Commission, Federal Communications Commission, Alien Property Custodian, Farm Credit Administration, United States Railroad Administration and the Central Statistical Board.

Bacon's charges were revealed in a letter to the Civil Service Reform League.

"There has been some comment on the reduction in the number of classified employes shown for the fiscal years 1933 and 1934," Mr. Mitchell says. "This reduction was due, as the records will show, largely to the operation of the economy acts. The increase in the unclassified positions is due to the establishment of various emergency agencies.

"There was a rise in the number of classified employes from June 30, 1934, to June 30, 1935, and the statistics for June 30 next," Mr. Mitchell continues, "will doubtless show a further marked increase, due to the fact that Congress or the President added numerous establishments to the classified service."

Mr. Bacon's reference to the "civil service lists" probably referred to the number of competitive classified positions in the Federal service, Mr. Mitchell declares.

"It is doubtful," the merit system chief says, "if he had any reference to the eligible lists, as there is no necessary relation of persons appointed to positions. This is due to the fact that some examinations are very popular and perhaps one or two hundred thousand people apply, whereas only a portion of these may finally receive appointments."

Civil Service Commission officials also call attention to the "record number" of persons added to the eligible lists in the last two years. These lists are used by non-civil service agencies widely, as well as the old line establishments, they report, and point to the large number of so-called patronage employes transferring from AAA, NRA and other agencies to civil service offices.

$1,620 Positions Open.

Civil Service Commission announces applications will be received until June 10 for the position of junior civil service examiner. The entrance salary is $1,620 a year, less a retirement deduction of 3½ per cent.

Applicants must be college graduates, except that applications will be accepted from senior students under certain specified conditions. The examination will consist of a general and mental test. Additional information on this or other examinations may be obtained from Civil Service Commisison, Seventh and F streets northwest.

Local gardeners and others interested in planting trees and shubbery to attract wild birds will be interested in a leaflet on "Fruit Attractive to Birds," by W. L. McAtee (R), Biological Survey.

H. F. Johnson Promoted.

Harvey F. Johnson today takes over his new duties as engineer in chief of the Coast Guard with the rank of captain, under Presidential appointment. The commission was delivered by Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, Coast Guard commandant, at a headquarters ceremony.

Capt. Johnson succeeds Capt. R. B. Adams, retired. He has been acting engineer in chief during the illness of Capt. Adams. The new engineer in chief is a native of Mississippi and has been with the Coast Guard since 1907, including 14 years sea duty. Prior to his new appointment, he held the rank of commander.

James F. Ryan is reported ready to take over the position of head of the Interpretative Division, Internal Revenue, when the resignation of George Rogers becomes effective May 31.

Bird-Banding Work.

Q. Under what direction and authorization is the bird-banding work of the Government performed?—Mrs. Philip Gooding (P).

A. Bird banding in North America is under the general direction of the Bureau of Biological Survey, Agriculture, in co-operation with the National Parks of Canada. In the United States the migratory bird treaty act authorizes this function among other investigations for the protection of migratory birds. Under regulation 9 of this act special Federal permits are issued to volunteer co-operators who do most of the actual banding. It is the opinion of professional ornithologists over the entire world that bird banding is now one of the most important methods available for developing accurate information relating to the living bird. The study of bird migration is the principal subject served. By study of banding records, new features in the periodic movements of birds are constantly being discovered. During the first 15 years after the work was taken over by the Biological Survey in 1920 nearly 2,250,000 birds were banded, and the number of return or recovery records in that period was about 200,000. As a result, important scientific studies of sex ratio, longevity, temperature control, plumage, avian psychology, homing instinct, and many other problems are being made. Frederick C. Lincoln (F) is in immediate charge of the banding work.
